

Psychologist Faces Impostor Charges

KIMBERLEY (CP) — A man alleged to have claimed he had a master's degree in psychiatry will appear in court Friday charged with using bogus credentials to get a school psychologist's job at this southeastern British Columbia community.

Charged with false pretences and two charges of uttering forged documents is Ronald Ivan MacDonald, 30, alias James Colin MacDougall who has been released from custody on $2,000 bail.

No plea was entered when MacDonald appeared in court last Friday.

Harvey Drudel, secretary-treasurer of the Kimberley school board, said in a prepared statement Tuesday that a man named James Colin MacDougall replied to the board's advertisement for a district psychologist on July 5, 1967.

"The school board interviewed a Mr. MacDougall on Aug. 13 in Kimberley and his credentials, which appeared to be well-established, were re-

Drafted for Union Nationale

SPLIT-NATION PLAN FANS CONTROVERSY

Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — The federal government's efforts to preserve national unity were shaken Tuesday by disclosure of a plan, linked to the Union Nationale party, to make Quebec an independent state within five years.

A spokesman for Prime Minister Pearson said he is still unaware of the plan, carried in full in the Quebec City newspaper L'Action.

But Pearson, he added, was not going to be in favor of "anyone's plan to break up Canada. That's his position."

MORE PRESSURE
Reports about the existence of the plan have fanned the flames of crisis over national unity and added to the pressures on Pearson to scrap his plans for early retirement.

L'Action links the "secret plan" directly to the Union Nationale, led by Premier Daniel Johnson.

The feeling here is that it is not the policy of the party, but it could become the policy.

NO MANDATE?
Observers believe that the separatist wing of the party is trying to persuade the party to accept it, but the moderates believe the party does not have a mandate from the people to go that far.

L'Action says the plan is laid out in a confidential document drafted by 40 specialists, some of them not engaged in politics but invited to serve on an advisory committee that prepared the Union Nationale program before the June, 1966, provincial election.

ECONOMIC TIES
It is entitled: "How to bring about a confederation of two autonomous states."
It favors total economic integration between English-Canada and French-Canada.

'This Is Our Canada'

'Turned Down To Win'

VANCOUVER (CP) — A Quebec cabinet minister spoke forcefully in defence of a united Canada Tuesday, and refused to concede that his province is moving towards separatism.

"This is our Canada," Fernand J. Lafontaine, Quebec roads minister, told a press conference at the Canadian Good Roads Association convention. He is president of the CGRA.

Mr. Lafontaine, after announcing that the world highways conference of the International Road Federation would be held in Montreal in 1970, emphasized that Quebec still would be a province of Canada at that time.

MAJOR ROLES
He said he agreed with members of the Quebec cabinet and the Union Nationale that the objective for Canada should be "equality, yes, uniformity, never."

"I feel as 'at home' here in Vancouver as I do in the province of Quebec," he said. "This is our Canada."

QUEBEC (CP) — Two leading members of a Quebec separatist club said Tuesday they helped prepare a document for the Union Nationale party suggesting a five-year plan for Quebec independence.

But they said their plan, drawn up as possible party policy for the 1968 general election, was rejected by the Union Nationale because "the party was interested in winning an election."

L'Action, one of the provincial capital's two evening dailies, published portions of the document Tuesday, describing it as the Union Nationale's "secret plan for the political independence of Quebec."

Major roles in drafting the document were played by Guy Bertrand, 30-year-old lawyer, and Georges Caron, 35-year-old stock broker, respectively president and past-president of the Club Fleur-de-Lys.

Mr. Bertrand said in an interview he acted as co-chairman of a 40-man "committee on the affairs of the nation," formed by the Union Nationale to study possible policies concerning Quebec's political status.

SUBMISSIONS
At this time the Union Nationale was in a period of policy study and had requested submissions from representative associations in Quebec, such as labor unions and agricultural organizations.

The Bertrand committee was one of 12 committees within the Union Nationale co-ordinated by Marcel Masse, associate minister of education, to draw up a political program, to fight against the then Liberal government.

Mr. Bertrand described his committee as the "inner sanctum" of the Union Nationale party where members worked incognito. Among members, he said, were employees of Radio-Canada, the CBC's French-language network.

IN SECRECY
He said the committee members, who made submissions with the understanding that they were working in secrecy, arrived at a decision Quebec should have "political sovereignty within a Canadian association."

Mr. Bertrand said the committee was then instructed by the party to work out a solution for political sovereignty which would be "considered by the party brass, including Premier Daniel Johnson."

Shlepin: Out

MOSCOW (CP) — The Communist Party central committee met in plenary session Wednesday and approved a new Soviet budget believed to contain a substantial increase in published defence spending.

An official communique said the committee also voted to relieve Alexander Shlepin, once regarded as a rising star, of his duties as a party secretary.

The committee also decided to raise minimum wages, and increase pensions and holidays for millions of Soviet workers.

Shlepin, youngest member of the politburo at 47, was appointed head of the Central Trade Union Council last July 11.

HARLINGEN, Tex. (AP) — The Rio Grande, breaking every man-made obstacle in its path, toppled a levee north of Harlingen late Tuesday night and a new surge of floodwaters bore down on the already ravaged city.

Communications with Harlingen, in the middle of the flood-ravaged Rio Grande Valley, were all but impossible.

A military radio message from Harlingen bumped all conventional traffic off the air for an urgent message.

"The floodway levee near Farm Road 506 has broken," the message said. The area to the east and west of Harlingen and La Feria was taking more water.

The Rio Grande, on a record rampage with its crest still above Harlingen, toppled emergency dikes as fast as they could be put up Tuesday.

Paul Reiser, an Associated Press reporter forced to flee along with thousands of residents, reported this scene in a radio message from Harlingen Air Force Base:

FLOATING HOUSES
"The water was coming out of stores downtown. A number of people on army trucks are trying to get out. Babies are crying. Their parents are crying."

The Rio Grande was a great inland sea studded with floating houses, dead cattle and other debris from Hurricane Beulah. Sandbagging crews lost a battle to keep the floodwaters, which were coming mainly from a floodway diversion area called Arroyo Colorado, out of Harlingen. Unhindered by their efforts, the floodwaters surged into the heart of this city of 41,000.

'Have to Come Through UN'

Jordanian Confident Pact Chances Good

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Foreign Minister Muhammad Audeb el-Aamiry of Jordan told reporters Tuesday "the chances are good" that a settlement may be reached in the Middle East deadlock.

Aamiry made the prediction after conferring for more than an hour with the U.S. state secretary, Dean Rusk.

The Jordanian expressed hope that Israel would move out of positions along the west bank of the Jordan River. Reminded that the Tel Aviv government has announced its determination to stay there for the time being at least, he said:

"There is a possibility of a way out. I think this will have to come through the UN but the chances are good."

A spokesman for the Israeli delegation told reporters Israel had set up strongpoints along the west bank to bolster military security. He stressed that this did not signify any move by Israel to decide the future of the disputed territory.

Happiest, Healthiest Nation Will Be First to Ban Cars

VANCOUVER (CP) — The automobile will disappear before the end of the next century, the Canadian Good Roads Association was told Tuesday.

Dr. Gordon M. Shrum, chancellor of Simon Fraser University and co-chairman of British Columbia Hydro, made this prediction in his keynote address to the association's 49th annual convention.

Dr. Shrum said there is no such thing as an unlimited resource, and said world supplies of gas and oil would disappear during the 21st century.

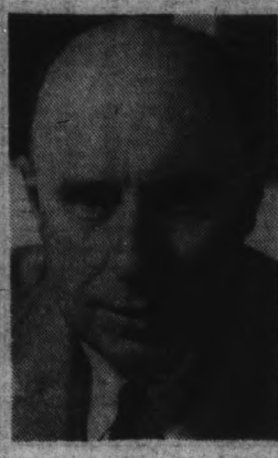

He said pollution, an ever-increasing accident rate and the fact that land will be needed for raising food will contribute to the demise of cars and highways.

Dr. Shrum, predicting that the number of vehicles in Canada will increase to 40,000,000 by the end of this century, said the first country to abolish the motor car will be the healthiest, happiest and wealthiest in the world. This would come in the 21st century.

Fernand J. Lafontaine, Quebec's minister of roads and president of the CGRA, told the more than 1,000 delegates highway building must be co-ordinated with overall planning of mass transport systems.

"The techniques of transportation should not only interest the road engineer," he said, "The problem should also be considered by the town planners, the sociologists, economists and architects if we want to build cities worthy of man."

Policy Critic In Buzzsaw

From UPI, LAT, AP

Senator Clifford Case (R-N.J.) in Washington Tuesday attacked President Johnson's conduct of the Vietnam war—and promptly ran into a buzzsaw of criticism from senate leaders of both parties.

Case centred his criticism on Johnson's use of the Tonkin Gulf Resolution, adopted by Congress in August, 1964, saying the president had violated the trust of Congress and created a "crisis of confidence" by escalating the war in a way Congress never intended.

In other developments involving Vietnam:

● Gen. Earle Wheeler, chairman of the U.S. Joint Chiefs of Staff, said he believed the war in Vietnam could be ended relatively soon if the U.S. military were allowed to cut off Communist supplies pouring in from Russia and Red China.

● Johnson's Vietnam policies will come under fire today from an unusual new entry in the ranks of "doves"—American business executives who will meet to press for a negotiated settlement of the war.

● North Vietnam Tuesday rejected U.S. Ambassador Arthur Goldberg's appeal in the United Nations for a negotiated settlement in Vietnam.

● In Saigon South Vietnamese military Buddhists announced plans for antigovernment demonstrations throughout the country Thursday.

North Presses Siege

● On the fighting front Communist batteries in and north of the so-called demilitarized zone carried into the 26th day their artillery siege of Con Thien, about two miles south of the zone, inflicting a rising toll of dead and wounded U.S. Marines.

● In the air North Vietnam's official news agency said U.S. planes struck again Tuesday in the Hanoi and Haiphong areas, and claimed five planes shot down. There was no comment from U.S. sources.

Case's criticism of Johnson drew first reaction from his own party leader in the upper house—Senator Everett Dirksen, who said he was afraid Case's speech would give comfort to the enemy.

Close Haiphong Port

Gen. Wheeler called for the closing of the port of Haiphong, terming it one of the most important military moves of the war.

He urged unceasing bombing of North Vietnam, including rail lines from South China to Hanoi "until we really strangle these people to where they cannot support their war in the south."

An organization claiming to represent approximately 700 business and financial executives opposed to the Vietnam war will meet for the first time today to apply pressure from a new quarter for a negotiated settlement of the war.

The organization, which calls itself Business Executives Move for Vietnam Peace, said its purpose "is to present an organized united and constructive force of national stature to help resolve the Vietnam conflict."

The Buddhists' announcement of coming demonstrations drew a prompt promise from Premier Nguyen Cao Ky of a crackdown if the protests became significant.

Plans for the Buddhist protests in Saigon, Hue, Da Nang, four other cities and all of South Vietnam's 44 provinces were announced in an "urgent" communique issued by Thich (Ven. Master) Tri Quang from his Saigon pagoda.

The official Hanoi newspaper Nhan Dan, referring obliquely to negotiations, the paper said talks could take place only when the U.S. gives up its "aggressive policy."

From Yemen

Egypt Will Complete Troop Withdrawal

CAIRO (UPI)—Egypt's costly, five-year adventure in Yemen appears to be drawing to a close.

The semi-official newspaper Al-Ahram announced Tuesday the government expects to complete the withdrawal of its troops from Yemen before the end of the year.

Egypt had upward of 50,000 troops propping up the Yemeni republican regime, which seized power in a 1962 coup but had had to fight ever since against royalist mountain tribesmen supported by Saudi Arabia.

The troop total now is below 25,000, due to withdrawals during the Israeli war. Egypt and Saudi Arabia agreed at a post-war Arab summit conference to withdraw support for both Yemeni factions, in the interest of unity against Israel.

BERLIN (Reuters)—Mayor Heinrich Alberts, who took over last December when Willy Brandt joined the new West German coalition government, resigned Tuesday over criticism of his administration's handling of student riots during a visit by the Shah of Iran June 2.

City police chief Erich Duenkel had already been pensioned prematurely and Interior Affairs Director Wolfgang Buesch had resigned. Alberts will continue in office as a caretaker until the city parliament elects a new mayor.

Brown Plumps for Peace Start

UNITED NATIONS (CP)—British Foreign Secretary George Brown pleaded Tuesday for a "balanced settlement" of the Vietnam war based on the Geneva agreements and said negotiations should start "immediately"—even before the shooting and bombing stop.

In his general policy speech before the 122-nation General Assembly he complained that North Vietnam "had declined to grasp the many opportunities to negotiate which have been offered."

"MUSIC WITHDRAWN"

On the Middle East situation, Brown also called for a "balanced approach" to settle the aftermath of the five-day June war between Israel and her Arab neighbors. He said Israel "must withdraw" from territory captured in Egypt, Jordan and Syria "but, equally, Israel's neighbors must recognize its right to exist" and enjoy security within its frontiers.

ARABS REFUSE

Brown thus straddled the two main issues dividing the two parties. The Arabs look to the UN to brand Israel as the aggressor and to demand Israel withdrawal. Israel, on the other hand, insists on direct negotiations with the Arabs, without UN or any other third-party participation. Such negotiations would be tantamount to Arab recognition of Israel as a state, which the Arabs have refused.

Brown spoke in advance of a "discussion dinner" for the Big Four foreign ministers with

Despite the pleas of Brown and others, observers saw no indication of any change in attitude on either side. This was underlined in the speech Monday of Israeli Foreign Minister Abba Eban who warned that the UN must not become a substitute for direct negotiations. Secretary-General U Thant Tuesday night.

Vietnam and the Middle East were expected to dominate the discussion but the positions so far stated in the assembly on those questions were so hard that little hope was held for any progress in private.

Along with Brown, the guests are U.S. State Secretary Dean Rusk, Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko of the Soviet Union, Foreign Minister Maurice Couve de Murville of France, and their respective UN ambassadors.

Couve de Murville met for dinner Monday night with Canadian External Affairs Minister Paul Martin in one of the traditional private meetings of foreign ministers in the early weeks of the General Assembly.

Martin delivers Canada's major policy speech in the UN today. He is third on the list of speakers.

A Leader's Choice

PROGRESSIVE CONSERVATIVES across the country were perturbed when Mr. Michael Starr, soon after his party's choice of Mr. Robert Stanfield to succeed Mr. John Diefenbaker, offered to resign as House leader.

Mr. Starr had been a staunch friend of the Old Chief, and himself a candidate for the party leadership, and, as he said, perhaps Mr. Stanfield would like to have someone closer to him as his lieutenant in the Commons.

But Mr. Starr wisely decided that with all his tested qualities, as well as 15 years of experience in the Commons and as a labor minister in the Diefenbaker cabinet, Mr. Starr was the man he wanted.

He may have remembered, too, how Mr. Starr had pleaded for unity within the Tory party when factional fighting threatened to destroy its effectiveness in opposition and its hope of leading the nation out of economic error and cultural collisions.

Mr. Starr so often warned against "our peculiar form of political hark-kari, committed in public, disheartening to our friends and encouraging to our enemies."

Even after Mr. Stanfield's leadership victory there still remained the suspicion that the Old Guard of the Diefenbaker faction, like Napoleon's, would rather die than surrender.

Mr. Starr's acceptance of the House leadership under the new leadership was reassuring, for he was one of those loyalists.

On Monday, as the Commons reassembled, it was Mr. George Chatterton, Esquimaux-Sanich, one of Mr. Diefenbaker's most dedicated supporters, who led the Conservative attack with a motion for emergency debate on the "disastrous" housing shortage.

It was an attack, significantly, which saw a striking coalescence, a closing of the ranks among the Tories, notably and too frequently absent when Mr. Diefenbaker almost single-handedly led the assault.

This new aggressiveness stems from the enthusiasm engendered for Mr. Stanfield at the leadership convention and the suddenly buoyant hopes of the party in large measure. But it is no doubt due, at least in part, to the rallying of the Old Guard and Mr. Starr's thrusting tactics.

Mr. Starr has another formidable endowment, in that he speaks for that "Third Force" in the national composition which is of neither French nor British ancestry. He is a man of Ukrainian stock, with three languages, and as such has potentially large influence in a truly national party.

Derelict of Duty

SICKNESS alone, one might reasonably conclude, should permit an MP's absence from the opening of a new session of Parliament. In the case of cabinet ministers the obligation to be present should be paramount.

And what was the line-up on Monday when Parliament Hill swept back into action after an eleven-week vacation? Only 17 of the 27 cabinet members who sit on the government front benches were on hand to do their duty. And a round half-dozen of the senior members of the Pearson administration were among the absentees.

Why weren't they there? The prime minister sought to excuse them by saying they were away on urgent business, but what is more urgent than the nation's business, especially at the start of a new session?

In the result Mr. Pearson was caught napping, unable to field a barrage of questions on important problems. Although chief of his clan he could not explain matters that are collectively the responsibility of his clan.

Not surprising, perhaps, since often he has seemed vague about things his cabinet ministers were presumed to be attending to, but another indication of the weakness of his leadership.

By contrast the opposition benches were packed with MPs ready, able and willing to get to grips with the country's business, and with the Conservatives in particular showing a vigor and cohesion that has already, according to seasoned gallery correspondents, put the Liberals in a state of alarm.

The situation has its amusing side. The Liberals were credited with heaving sighs of relief that their principal parliamentary opponent, John Diefenbaker, would no longer be leading the fray from the opposition benches. Now the word is that they fear even more the revived spirit that animates the Conservatives, and the power of debate spread throughout ranks now free of the overwhelming influence of Mr. Diefenbaker.

Patently the Pearson government will have to pull up its socks if it is to match wits and competence with the opposition. And have the leading members of its clan on show in Parliament into the bargain. That in any case is where they ought to be.

Double Nuisance

BRITISH COLUMBIA'S two large cities are both as a rule quite well ventilated, and so even though traffic is constantly increasing it is not a matter of calamitous consequence that Attorney-General Robert Bonner prefers to wait for a while before attacking air pollution by automotive exhaust gases. And he probably will not need to wait long before someone else does the job.

Mr. Bonner's view is that there is no point in presenting legislation requiring installation of exhaust control devices if effective devices are not available, and there is no certainty that they are.

But no such doubt seems to afflict the government of Ontario, which has announced that the 1969-model cars must be fitted in this way, and it seems hardly likely that if the regulation applies in the biggest markets the manufacturers will not make exhaust purifiers standard equipment.

The attorney-general can expect no action from outside the province, however, on another nuisance created by automotive exhaust: noise, which itself is recognized as a form of pollution, with an adverse effect on health.

It is evident that in this respect British Columbia's regulations under the Motor Vehicle Act simply do not work; that they are too loosely worded to ensure that all vehicles will have mufflers that deserve the name. In fact, amplification appears to be the purpose in the show-off set.

If next spring's legislation includes an enforceable requirement of mufflers that muffle, Mr. Bonner will deserve a quick round of applause as loud as the racket he will thereby have eliminated. And it will be none too soon.

Washington Calling

End to the War Remains Remote

By MARQUEE CHILDS

DESPITE all the rumors of peace and the allegations of double dealing one harsh, brutal fact remains. An end to the war in Vietnam is as remote as at any time in the past two years.

Visitors to North Vietnam report a hardening line despite hopeful interpretations of a recent speech by Premier Pham Van Dong. The evidence indicates that Hanoi is determined to wait for the American elections next year in the belief a Republican administration will pull out. The precedent is 1953 when Dwight D. Eisenhower responded to growing weariness with the Korean war and promised to find a way out.

A study of what is being written over the government radio in North Vietnam shows that every effort is being made to build up morale for resistance into an indefinite future. Every incident large or small within the United States that can be interpreted as opposition to the war is seized on and magnified many times over.

This is the value of the visit of Stokely Carmichael who has been lauded as an ally in the "war of liberation." Those with little or no knowledge of the United States would believe from Hanoi's propaganda that Carmichael was assuming the leadership of a mass revolt of Negroes against the American "imperialists" on their home ground. Partly this can be put down to the tightly sealed world that Hanoi preserves against the slightest intimation that victory is not eventually certain. Any visitor who suggests that in spite of signs of dissent the United States means to prosecute the war, short of negotiation or a mutual cease fire, is rebuffed.

Cabled reports sent by visitors from Cuba, Mali and Norway have in recent weeks been eagerly seized on to prove North Vietnam was bound to triumph.

Politicking Politely

From The Globe and Mail
COULD we be on the threshold of an era of polite politicking, gentlemanly gives and takes of political campaigning.

The new Conservative Opposition leader, Robert Stanfield, will doubtless set his own restrained tone to Ottawa exchanges, but meanwhile Liberal leader Robert Nixon is giving Ontario a taste of soft-pedal criticism. When his meaning is "port-barrel politics" he speaks instead of "the old-fashioned political approach."

If we are to follow his campaign, we will need a glossary of sorts. The following may do for a start: "Our economic planning has not been without fault." (The province is bankrupt.) "A charming little town." (Sudbury is a slum.) "Mr. Roberts at times appears aloof." (He does not know what is going on.) "The unspooled beauty of the North." (The North has been abandoned.)

From the Scriptures

My son, keep my words, and by my commandments will thee. Keep my commandments and live; and my law as the apple of thine eye. — Proverbs, 7:1-2.

The conclusion of a Norwegian report was quoted as follows: "The more bombs are being dropped the more united this extremely tried people becomes. The situation is becoming worse for the Americans every day."

In every medium tremendous stress is on the effort to put Hanoi and the other cities of the north on a war footing. Objective reports tend to verify the success this effort has had. Whole populations, with the exception of essential military units, have been moved into outlying areas. Thousands of air-aid shelters and trenches have been built along the coast where strikes from American aircraft carriers are most frequent.

There seems good reason to believe that even if Hanoi and Haiphong were levelled the north could continue to supply the few hundred tons a day of war material necessary to sustain the guerrilla attack on the South.

Supporters of the Johnson war policy frequently say that evidence of dissent in the United States keeps the Communist States keeps the Communist regime in the war. The implication is that if only there were an unbroken consensus Hanoi would call it quits.

Informed opinion does not support this view. The roots of the resolution to fight on go much deeper than that into the ideology of "wars of liberation" with the constant propaganda backing of Red China. Evidence of dissent is useful, however, for morale purposes, even though at times the evidence seems to be manufactured in Hanoi's propaganda factory.

An article in the influential journal Hoc Tap (Studies) discussed the "important force in the U.S. people's struggle movement against the aggressive war in Vietnam" of American women. Negro women are said to be united in an organization called "Angry Negro Women" which, according to the article, has held many demonstrations against the war and the women have "stood for days before the enlistment centre in Harlem to protest strongly against the draft and demand the return of Negro servicemen."

Sane Men in Control

AMERICAN planes bomb in Vietnam to within seven miles of the Chinese border. Washington indicates it will build a "thin" anti-ballistic defence against the possibility of a Chinese attack. Within China, violent convulsions continue so that the huge country often gives the impression of madness. Are all these facts connected? Could China go collectively so mad as to feel unreasonably provoked in her confrontation with the U.S. and launch a world war? And what about American psychology in all this?

The reasoning leading to answers for such questions is intricate; for instance, Americans say that it is perfectly safe to bomb near the Chinese border—which means, almost inevitably, that some U.S. planes will cross that border. The Chinese, Mr. Rusk assures us, will not try to start a war with the U.S. If this is so, why should America build an anti-missile defence against Chinese missiles that are not operational? Perhaps Washington believes that the Chinese will go to war as soon as they have enough missiles.

What would cause them to go to war? The desire to liberate Formosa, the feeling that U.S. military presence in Southeast Asia is an unbearable threat, and American violations of Chinese space an intolerable provocation?

There are among the U.S. military those who want a war with China, to annihilate her before she develops her military strength further; these men cannot bring themselves to believe it will ever be possible to get along with a strong China. They are not in control of American affairs but are occasionally in control of U.S. forces near China and may tend to escalate some peripheral incident involving Chinese and American forces, in the hope that an opportunity will thus be created to destroy China.

These men, one must repeat, are not in control of U.S. affairs but they exist and their existence is known through their writings, their speeches, their private conversations, Peking knows these Americans exist and that is one reason for the backbreaking Chinese struggle to produce modern weapons; the same ones among the Chinese leadership want a deterrent; they want to make sure that the same men in Washington will have a good reason for keeping the warlike under control.

There are some men on both sides and despite the current Chinese upsurge, some men still seem to control the policies of Peking; that is why Hong Kong is allowed to survive: China needs the trade with Hong Kong and it is a proof of sanity not to cut off one's nose to spite one's face. What does China want besides? A better standard of living. To this end she needs help which eventually must be from America. It would be insane for the Chinese to destroy the country from which they must get help eventually.

But the Americans and the Chinese both fear one another. Such fear gives the less sane opportunities to aggravate each small incident into a major war.

Great Experiment

Now we know that the new Peace Corps phase

AS it enters its seventh year, even top U.S. Peace Corps administrators admit that the "honeymoon is over," but they insist that the agency is writing a unique success story.

Since the summer of 1961, nearly 30,000 Americans have been sent overseas as volunteers.

Brent K. Ashabanner, acting deputy director of the corps, calls it "the largest international experiment in recorded history."

At the outset in 1961, he said, the idea was that American youngsters would teach modern skills and techniques to the peoples of the underdeveloped parts of the world.

In many cases he said, the Americans wound up learning more than they were able to teach.

But the lessons of the program and the Peace Corps' decision to set up independent training facilities are apparently causing strains between the agency and the academic community.

The new facilities will usually be operated in conjunction with established schools, but the corps will differ considerably from the usual university approach.

Universities have been training most of the volunteers. Ashabanner indicated that these university programs have been too formal, too much like the standard curriculum offered regular students.

He knows that the trainees care greatly about surviving with people as well as in places, he said. "We have found language fluency crucial to volunteer effectiveness (and) we devote from 300-400 hours to intensive language instruction."

The Peace Corps teaches 120 languages.

"We have made dramatic gains in technical studies. We now actually believe that we can take young men and women from Brooklyn and in three months teach them to raise chickens in India. We believe we can take liberal arts majors and teach them to grow rice in the Philippines or conduct disease surveys in Micronesia."

These agricultural efforts, he said, have been greatly boosted by the University of California survey and Fresno (Calif.) State College.

The new Peace Corps training program is drawing heavily on returning volunteers. Between 750-800 have been hired as language co-ordinators, job instructors and leaders of cultural studies seminars.

Approximately 25 per cent of the Peace Corps' 130 million annual budget will go for training, Ashabanner told the psychologists.

A major test centre will be set up at the University of Hawaii and will train more than 1,000 volunteers next year for work in the Philippines, Malaysia, Thailand and parts of Polynesia.

French in Canada

WE are being incessantly brainwashed with the statement that, "Canada is officially bilingual, the two languages being English and French." Nothing could be further from the truth since French has NOT been prescribed by statute as a language for general use in Canada, nor does that statement accord with the use of English and French as sanctioned by Section 133 of the BNA Act. In the province of Quebec, English and French have equal official status. This is not true in the other nine provinces.

Canada is NOT officially bilingual, as was clearly stated by the postmaster general when he spoke on a CBC program, entitled The Nation's Business (January 31, 1959) when he said, "Section 133 of the BNA Act stipulates the French language is official only in the Ottawa parliamentary debates and records, in the federal courts of justice and in the province of Quebec, but no where else; there is no provision for the other provinces."

In our opinion Section 133 of the BNA Act and the above statement by the postmaster general define unambiguously the official status of the French language in Canada and in the provinces of Canada.

Quick Aid

The United States government physicians believe that in the case of at least one patient with heart attack history, namely, Lyndon Johnson, equipment should be installed in his home. An electric defibrillator. This is not practicable for everyone. So equipment should be rushed to the patient.

I read in a U.S. magazine there is only one place in the world where this is being done. The Royal Victoria Hospital in Belfast, Ireland.

Dr. Partridge the cardiologist there says, "It's silly to keep intensive care units in the hospital when so many of these patients die in transit, one in every four."

The elderly couple who died recently on Hilda Avenue brought this to mind. At least one of them might have been saved.

Appreciativeness

The Victoria and Vancouver Island Multiple Sclerosis Society wishes to express its grateful thanks for the massive support of the first national-wide publicity program, sponsored by the Multiple Sclerosis Society of Canada between September 3 and 15, to acquaint all Canadians with the nature of this baffling disease, which has been called the greatest crippler of young adults and the most baffling of neurological mysteries.

Because of all the publicity, a great many more people know about multiple sclerosis than ever before and will be eager to help find its cause and cure. Our society is a member agency of the Victoria and Vancouver Island Appeal and is deeply appreciative to the residents of Victoria for their continuing and generous support. The patient aid program conducted by the Victoria and Vancouver Island Multiple Sclerosis Society is one of the most extensive in Canada.

Rudeness

I was one of the many Victorians fortunate enough to hear the Maharishi, but the occasion was somewhat spoiled by the astonishing rudeness of many people, particularly those, I believe, in the 12 to 16 age group.

These people persisted in a disgusting "gang play" because the Maharishi was delayed for a few moments, shuffled and whispered loudly throughout the talk, and because they hadn't the grace to listen to the Maharishi, stomped noisily from the hall throughout the lecture. When someone as wonderful as the Maharishi visits Victoria, I think it's a great shame some people haven't the intelligence or the manners to treat him politely.

Self-Support

At the risk of being accused of a little neighborly backslapping I must record my appreciation of Mr. Courtney Haddock's swan song as president of the Victoria Chamber of Commerce, in which he attempted to put the tourist industry where it belongs.

Nobody can deny the oft-quoted, "The tourist dollar rubs off on everybody," but who gets first slim at the cream—the hotels, motels, restaurants, and the tourist oriented entertainment and shows. A glance at the U.S. customs regulations will show how much can be gained by the stores, department or otherwise.

As a Sanilich resident I agree with the stand taken by the Sanilich council, something should be done to make the Victoria tourist industry businesslike and responsible.

We have heard strong arguments in favor of a room tax, and less strong ones against it. We may have to collect this tax without having the privilege of controlling its use; in other words we could have missed the boat.

Mr. Haddock points out the advantages of a self-supporting tourist industry. It is estimated that about $400,000 per year could be raised from a 4 per cent room tax. With this juicy sum of money we could advertise in all the glossy magazines in North America, employ a tourist commissioner to co-ordinate tourist policy—when we get some—finance a convention centre, and pull ourselves out of the Little Wooden Hut League with our tourist information.

If any hotelier or motelier fears that too much of the money he is collecting is being used for purposes other than boosting his own particular business—and this does appear likely—adequate representation on the tourist board would take care of such doubts. The city council of Victoria does not actually guarantee the tourist industry $50,000 a year of taxpayers' money; supporting the Sanilich action becomes contagious—what then?

Enthusiasm

From the activities of the Victoria Symphony Society in recent months with changes on the board of directors and the appointment of a new resident conductor of the orchestra earlier in the year, and also this being centennial year, a great enthusiasm has been stirred up on making the concert season of '67 and '68 the most successful period since the symphony society was inaugurated 27 years ago.

Furthermore, Lazo Gati, the new conductor of the orchestra, has already established himself in the hearts of the community before the concert season opens Oct. 1.

It might be pointed out that Lazo Gati conducted a concert on Salt Spring Island last spring which made a great impression on a crowded audience. Then just recently he has conducted two open-air concerts—one in Beacon Hill Park before a crowd of 5,000 people and the other in front of the legislative buildings. Apart from the many talents possessed by Lazo Gati, he carries with him and passes on the motto of fellowship and service. Victoria is fortunate in having him as a resident citizen.

Better Balance

As the new academic year gets under way, may we point out that Canadian students are not represented by the left-led CUS (Canadian Union of Students) any more than the SUPA (Student Union For Peace Action), Young Socialist Alliance, CYC (Company Of Young Canadians) or weekend hippies.

We also hope that this year's "academic freedom" does not degenerate further into academic delinquency, academic obscenity and academic treason.

While defending the students' right to dissent, we also defend the right of other students to dissent against the dissenters. We trust that our professors will recognize right wing dissent as "social progress" as much as left wing dissent instead of labelling it Bitchism and Fascism!

Let us hope that the past performances of our campuses in the three Rs (Revolution, Revolt and Radicalism) will in future be balanced by more objective logic and reason.

Today In History

By THE CANADIAN PRESS
The British under Gen. William Howe occupied Philadelphia 190 years ago today — in 1777 — instead of advancing northward to Gen. Burgoyne's army. As a result, the northern British column had to surrender at Saratoga.

However, rebel American armies, deprived of Philadelphia, had to winter at Valley Forge, where hardships made easier a bid to remove Washington from his command. Five months later France provided aid and the starved rebel army began the drive for victory and independence.

First World War: Fifty years ago today — in 1917 — German counter-attacks were repulsed at Zonnebeke in the Ypres Salient. French forces bested off extended enemy drives on their defence positions from the Aisne River to the Argonne.

Second World War: Twenty-five years ago today — in 1942 — nine Japanese planes were shot down over Guadalcanal in the Solomon Islands. Submarine sinkings in their western Atlantic reached their lowest point since the United States entered the war.

Unexcitement Red's Motif For Big Day

By JOSEPH KRAFT, from Moscow

Coming in from the Moscow airport a huge red streamer stretched across a four-lane highway announces the fact. Newspapers, radio, TV and signs galore echo the word. All over Moscow all means of communication at all times proclaim that five weeks hence this country will be celebrating the 50th anniversary of the Bolshevik revolution. Russia is on the eve.

But the motif of all the excitement is unexcitement. Like the blank impassive gaze of the man in the street, the official mood features steadiness, calmness, stability, an absence of elation and adventure. As it shapes up now the jubilee will be without jubilation.

The prevailing mood, now as usual, finds heightened expression in the field of cultural activity. With the onset of the anniversary, works which might cause trouble are being put off. No explosive novels or poems are expected in the near future.

As to cinema, two Soviet films known to the world but not here are being delayed until after the big day for what seems to be the mildest of unorthodoxities. One, called First Teacher, which won a prize at the Venice Film Festival, shows the travail of instructing Russian children in backward Central Asia. The second, called Robbery, tells the story of an old icon-maker in a way which evokes the themes of sex, race and religion. Entirely different is the theatre, which is active and unmistakably engaged.

One play, Ivan The Great, presents an indirect comment on the death of Stalin and its aftermath. Another, Mollere, is a broadside against censorship.

But the theatre is the exception proving the rule here is: Don't make waves. No doubt plays could be withdrawn through official pressure. But the Moscow companies, being reputable companies, do not have a long preparatory window before bringing out a play.

With drawal, accordingly, would have to precede opening night by very small time. It would be instantly known and resented. Less fuss is aroused by letting a play go on than by trying to stop it. Hence the special tolerance for theatre also denotes an attitude of caution, a disposition to minimize trouble.

The same caution and restraint finds expression everywhere else. In the matter of leadership, Party Secretary Leonid Brezhnev has emerged as Number One — but unobtrusively and without fanfare.

The economic reform, announced back in 1965, is inching forward. The five-year plan due for exposition two years ago may be unveiled before the 50th anniversary. But maybe it won't.

In foreign policy, an interesting symbol is the new importance of Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko. As a mover and shaker he may not have any more clout than before. But now, unlike the past, there are few major actions taken without benefit of his great experience. The decision to publish with the United States the draft of a non-proliferation treaty may be delayed until after his return from leave. If nothing else, the regime is being very careful not to make mistakes.

Sobriety is evident even in the field which most lends itself to spectacular fireworks. Since the crash of the astronaut Komarov last spring this country has not launched any manned space flights. A new shot — perhaps featuring a rendezvous of two space capsules — is expected to coincide with the anniversary.

Anti-Cuba Sanctions Hollow Victory

By HAROLD MORRISON
From London

The United States appears to have as much chance of bringing down Cuba through hemispheric sanctions as Britain has with her economic embargoes against Rhodesia. Sanctions, in these cases, don't seem to work.

Nevertheless there is an element of victory for the U.S. in the decision of the Organization of American States to adopt the American blacklist against ships which trade with Cuba.

Although Fidel Castro is able to put on a good show of progress only with heavy financial help from the Soviet Union, Latin peasants can see that Cuban workers are better fed, better housed and perhaps even happier than many so-called free men on the southern continent.

Latin blacklisting of ships and sharpening of the watch for Cuban subversion won't end the Cuban experiment. Indeed, the actions may make Castro feel he is gaining ground—that fear is growing among his enemies.

The OAS action, aside from its probable ineffectiveness against Castroism, reflects the widening gap between the U.S. and its European allies. In the realm of trade, many of them are eager to grasp contracts cold-shouldered by the U.S. Few of them have gone along with the U.S. policy of attempting to isolate Cuba.

Britain, for one, says it is opposed in principle to economic warfare and will continue to trade with Communist countries, banning only weapons and strategic goods which might be used in war.

Opposition to Vietnam War Splits Democrats

'Dump Johnson' Movement Grows

By ROBERT J. DONAVAN From Washington

Discontentment with President Johnson in the Democratic Party is growing on a scale reminiscent of the "Dump Truman" movement of 1947.

Almost every day brings word of some new dissent, some new effort to elect anti-Johnson delegates to the 1968 Democratic national convention, some new move to promote the candidacy of Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, or some new sign of party disorganization.

tion resulting largely from opposition to the Vietnam war.

At the moment, however, it is hard to find an objective authority who believes that the current revolt is likely to be any more successful in preventing Johnson's nomination than the revolt 20 years ago was in averting Truman's.

Still, the convention is more than 10 months away. If the war drags on, as the military authorities anticipate, there is at least time for the anti-Johnson revolt to grow to much greater proportions.

Certain of the primaries may provide more fuel for a "Dump Johnson" movement.

Under the revised law in Wisconsin, for example, Democrats can choose an undisciplined delegation to the national convention by merely voting "no" to the Johnson slate. Some of the president's critics are confident that he will be repudiated in the Wisconsin primary next April 2.

Even before Wisconsin it is possible that Johnson may be embarrassed in the New Hampshire primary on March 12. A slate of delegates favorable to Robert Kennedy is in the making there, albeit contrary to the Senator's wishes. A victory for this slate would be awkward for the President.

But even if Kennedy should succeed in having it withdrawn by going to New Hampshire, and personally campaigning for the Johnson slate, there are other possibilities for embarrassment to the President. A heavy write-in vote for some other Democrat would give aid and comfort to his enemies.

The Johnson critics are also hopeful that some states may put up favorite sons to head their convention delegations. As it now stands, the incipient Dump-Johnson movement lacks two important ingredients of the Dump-

Truman movement at its height.

First, since Sen. Kennedy declines to challenge the President for the nomination, the anti-Johnson forces have no strong candidate of their own.

The anti-Truman forces had a candidate, or rather the mirage of a candidate, in Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, then president of Columbia University.

It was not until the eve of the 1948 Democratic convention that the mirage faded when Eisenhower said categorically that he would refuse to accept the nomination.

Second, the anti-Johnson forces lack power bases, such as the big city Democratic machines. Twenty years ago two Democratic powers, Jacob M. Arvey in Chicago and Mayor William O'Dwyer in New York, announced their willingness to dump Truman.

Moreover the draft Eisenhower movement blossomed with such Democratic luminaries as Hubert H. Humphrey, then mayor of Minneapolis, John M. Bailey, then Democratic chairman of Connecticut, Paul Douglas of Illinois, Walter Reuther,

The Johnson critics are also hopeful that some states may put up favorite sons to head their convention delegations. As it now stands, the incipient Dump-Johnson movement lacks two important ingredients of the Dump-

James Roosevelt of California and Claude Pepper of Florida.

Today, although the Democratic Party is rife with disenchantment with the President and hostility to his policies in Vietnam, there is simply no such power visibly arrayed against him as was arrayed against Truman, to little effect as it turned out.

Nevertheless it is not what the anti-Johnson movement amounts to today but what it may develop into during the next 10 months that poses one of the crucial questions of 1968.

Activity among the anti-Johnson forces is increasing. A meeting of Democratic irregulars from nine states and the District of Columbia will be held in Pittsburgh on Saturday to plot the nomination of Robert Kennedy.

Is It Still a Sin to Commit Adultery?

Today, when we read, without shock, of legislation dealing with birth control, abortion, homosexuality and divorce, the biblical teachings on adultery might seem to be out of touch with the modern world. Yet, in October Reader's Digest, a distinguished minister shows why the Seventh Commandment is as relevant now as it was in Moses' day, and what the real goals behind it were. Is the "new morality" we hear so much about today new to students of the New Testament? Why is it wrong to have a purely negative attitude towards sex? This very important article discusses three aspects of sex that are part of our religious heritage... and the danger of rephrasing the marriage ceremony. Get October Reader's Digest now.

'Special Relationship' Fast Fading Anglo-American Honeymoon Over

By K. C. THALER, from London

Britain, irked by recent American go-it-alone moves, is increasingly convinced that the last remnants of the so-called Anglo-American "special relationship" is fading fast.

British press commentators have been sadly registering what they term "the end of the special relationship"—the political and emotional alignment that grew up between the two nations and solidified during and after the Second World War.

"The truth is, the special relationship no longer exists," commentators argued. "The honeymoon is over and done with."

The latest phase in the chapter of British weariness over the alignment with the United States was spotlighted by Washington's recent decision to establish an anti-ballistic missile system.

Nobody in Washington told the British about it in advance.

The move followed the U.S. congressional amendment a week ago that prevents Britain from bidding for contracts to build vessels for the U.S. navy.

The Anglo-American special relationship weighs heavily on the minds of British politicians and government leaders. Paradoxically, it is the Labor government more than its Conservative opposition which is clinging to the special relationship with Washington. Prime Minister Harold Wilson is one of its leading proponents.

Labor leaders consequently felt let down by Washington and cold-shouldered despite the fact that Wilson has been risking popularity by endorsing American policy in Vietnam.

British dispatches from Washington report that Britain's decision to scrap her east-of-Suez policy and bring home troops in Asia has proved to be the last straw in the special relationship.

The United States wanted Britain to retain a military posture in the Far East, at least for some time to come. But Wilson would not, much to the resentment of the U.S. administration.

With Britain looking increasingly to Europe, the basis for a continued special Anglo-American relationship—or what is left of it—is being further eroded.

U.S.-Canada Free Trade Seen as Two-Edged Sword

By ARCH MacKENZIE

Free trade between Canada and the U.S. might mean more dependence by Canada on its big neighbor and yet less vulnerability, says a major study favoring free trade.

"Free trade would tighten the already-close economic ties between the two countries," says a new book called Free Trade Between the U.S. and Canada, written by two Canadian-born economists.

"Yet paradoxically, Canada may become more dependent yet less vulnerable. Specifically, Canada would be entering through such a treaty that U.S. tariffs would not be raised against Canada exports and this possibility is one of the major present sources of Canadian vulnerability."

The authors are brothers Ronald J. Wonnacott, 37, and Paul Wonnacott, 34, both economists born in London, Ont. Ronald is on the faculty of the University of Western Ontario there while Paul, now is an American citizen teaching at the University of Maryland.

The book examining the potential economic effects of North American free trade is published by Harvard University Press. It is billed as "the first major attempt to estimate what would happen in Canada if all trade restrictions... were removed."

Free trade is favored on degree of control over its commercial policy because it would commit itself by treaty not to impose tariffs on imports from the partner."

But the book says that if Canada wants to maintain a high degree of autonomy over its fiscal and monetary affairs, free trade is preferable to a customs union.

Says the book: "Because possible U.S. domination is a matter of concern in Canada, the initiative for any movement to free trade must come from Canada... In the final analysis, it must be the Canadian public who weighs the respective gains and losses from free trade."

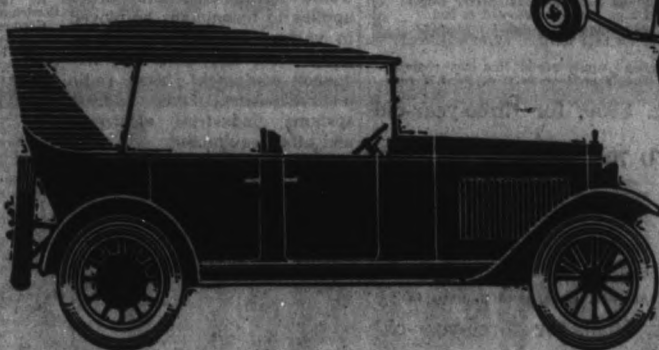

The book is timely in that, as the authors note, interest in North American free trade has recovered somewhat in the last few years. This has been stimulated by the formation of trading blocs such as sub-national European Common Market and Britain's so far unsuccessful effort to join.

Americans such as David Rockefeller, president of the Chase-Manhattan Bank, have recommended study of a free trade area involving Canada and the U.S. or even wider alliances including Britain or even Japan.

The Wonnacott book speculates that the Canadian dollar, pegged at 92.5 cents in terms of U.S. currency, would probably rise to parity with the U.S. under free trade.

Postal Rates Going Up By One Cent

OTTAWA (CP)—The government gave Parliament notice Tuesday that first-class postal rates in Canada are to be raised one cent, to five cents on letters for city delivery and to six cents for out-of-town letters.

When the new rates become effective depends on Parliamentary action. The government has listed the bill as one it wants passed before Christmas but, if approved, the new rates may not take effect until after the Christmas mail rush.

Rates for first-class letters mailed to destinations abroad may also be increased, but this will depend on getting reciprocal agreements with other countries. The international rates aren't controlled by the Post Office Act, which Parliament is being asked to amend.

In the formal notice appearing in Tuesday's Commons Journals, Postmaster-General Cote said an amended rate structure for newspapers and periodicals will also be introduced. No details were given, but the Commons public accounts committee has been calling since 1953 for higher rates to offset the expense of carrying this kind of mail, known as second class.

Second-class rates vary according to the circulation and frequency of publication of the newspapers and periodicals. The loss in handling second-class mail was estimated at $35,000,000 for the 1963-64 fiscal year.

Third-class rates are not to be affected by the government's bill, it was learned from a postal authority.

Postcard Puzzle

These rates apply to books, newspapers, magazines, catalogues, circulars, and greeting cards when mailed by the public—not the publishers. The rate now is three cents for the first two ounces and one cent for each additional ounce.

A post office spokesman was unable to say whether postcards would be affected by the rate increase, or whether additional charges for first-class letters after the first ounce would be increased, too.

Present first-class letter rates for in-town or local delivery, are four cents for the first ounce and two cents for each additional ounce.

For out-of-town delivery, rates are five cents for the first ounce and three cents for each additional ounce.

One post office source said it seemed reasonable to him, per-

Previous Boosts

The government raised third-class and C.O.D. package rates in April, 1964, and U.S.-Canada air mail rates in July, 1964. On Jan. 1, 1965, postal rates to many foreign countries were raised, and the parcel post rate structure was modified in Canada.

The post office department in the last three years has seen a rapid switch in its financial picture. From a nominal surplus of $20,000,000 in net postal revenue over expenditures in 1963, the service has moved to an estimated deficit of $3,500,000 this year.

Tuesday's notice made no mention of air mail rates. All first-class letters not exceeding eight ounces in weight are carried by air between principal cities in Canada at the regular first-class mail rate when air cargo space is available.

Most first-class mail to these countries now travels by air, however, at basic rates of eight cents an ounce for the U.S., 10 cents for each half ounce to Bermuda, Mexico, Central and South America and the West Indies, and 15 cents for each half ounce to the United Kingdom, Ireland and Europe.

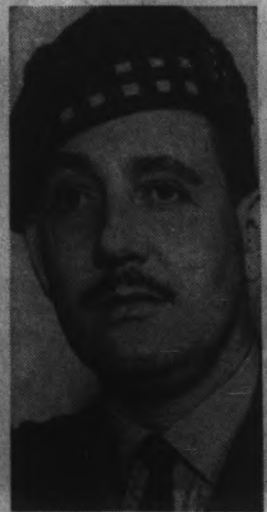

Striking Role Given To Scots

The Canadian Scottish Regiment (Princess Mary's) has been assigned a new role in the revised national militia plan.

The local militia unit will provide a strike company that has been trained as an amphibious force.

Commanding officer of the unit, Lt.-Col. D. R. Coell, said Tuesday he was pleased with the role the unit would be asked to fill and added there would be room for 50 recruits to fill the new task.

The regiment will also provide a civil emergency task force headquarters group. It is expected the new plan will be implemented in January, 1968.

B.C. Tax Expert:

Future Dim For Carter

OTTAWA (CP)—A spokesman for the Vancouver Board of Trade, who spent nearly five hours Monday discussing the Carter royal commission report on taxation with the government, said Tuesday he is convinced the controversial Carter proposals are dead.

The government is more interested in reforming the present tax law framework than adopting the radically new proposals proposed by the commission last spring, said Jacques Barbeau, chairman of the Vancouver group's tax committee.

2 1/2 HOURS

Mr. Barbeau said he came to this conclusion after he and a delegation spent 2 1/2 hours Monday with Robert Bryer, deputy finance minister, and officials of the finance department studying the Carter plan.

"The ministers went to great lengths to emphasize that the Carter report is not the government's report, and that a white paper will be issued this winter which will not be the final outline of tax policy either."

WHITE PAPER

"We got the impression that the white paper will still leave a great deal of room for debate and discussion."

"After talking to them, we've come to the conclusion that the government has thrown the Carter report out and now is looking at means to reform the present tax structure."

Mr. Barbeau told a press conference the sweeping proposals of the royal commission headed by Toronto tax consultant Kenneth Carter "allow no regional differences."

"While we are not looking for concessions for British Columbia, the Carter proposals would have far less impact on, say, Ontario, than it would on the Maritime provinces or B.C.," he said.

He cited as an example the Carter proposals to rescind spe-

Job Challenge Fascinates Ombudsman

EDMONTON (CP)—Retired RCMP commissioner George McClellan, appointed this year by the Alberta government as Canada's first ombudsman, said Tuesday he feels as if he is starting life all over again.

In an interview after his first month in office, Mr. McClellan applied adjectives such as "fascinating" and "challenging" to the job which has him answering, directing or studying problems contained in three to 10 letters a day.

About 100 were waiting for him when he arrived Sept. 1. "These are genuinely troubled people," Canada's former chief policeman said.

Many cases involve people with problems not knowing where to turn. It's not in the act, but they usually are directed to appropriate officials—government, civic or private.

Mr. McClellan said the majority of the problems brought to his attention are not covered in the Ombudsman Act, involving debts, civil court cases and litigations which have become costly.

The act expressly prohibits discussion of any problems taken to the ombudsman, but Mr. McClellan said he was able to say a fair number involved land titles, and some concerned taxes and zoning of improved land, and recovery of tax-forfeited land.

He said the first 100 cases had been answered. Some were not in his jurisdiction, additional information had been requested on a number of others and a few were already under study.

Lawyer Tells Inquiry:

No Gift Involved In Minister Deal

EDMONTON (CP)—An Edmonton lawyer told a judicial inquiry Tuesday that Welfare Minister A. J. Hooke did not receive a house and lot in the residential suburb of Sherwood Park as a gift.

George Bryan, who at one time served as solicitor for A. L. Trowbridge and Associates Ltd., developers of Sherwood Park, said Mr. Hooke received the lot and had his house moved to it as one of the conditions of sale of another piece of land to Trowbridge.

He was giving evidence during the ninth day of a judicial inquiry into allegations that Mr. Hooke and E. W. Homan, former provincial treasurer, used or attempted to use their public offices for personal gain.

The allegations were made during the last session of the legislature by Garth Turcott, then New Democratic Party member for Fincher Creek-Crownest.

The information that Mr. Hooke had received the house and lot "for no consideration" was contained in a document tabled in the house by Mr. Turcott. The document now is in evidence at the inquiry.

Sherwood Park, 10 miles east of Edmonton, was developed as a residential community on land owned in part by Mr. Hooke.

FOURTY ACRES

Earlier evidence indicated that when he sold his quarter section, Mr. Hooke reserved for himself the 40 acres surrounding his house.

Mr. Bryan said it was this land that Mr. Hooke sold to Trowbridge.

But, he said, Mr. Hooke had been reluctant to sell because he "liked his home and wanted to remain there."

Quebecers Ask Themselves Do We Stay or Do We Go?

OTTAWA (CP)—Most Quebecers are still debating whether they want their province to remain within Confederation or separate, Claude Ryan, editor of the Montreal newspaper Le Devoir, said Tuesday.

The battle over the province's future will have to be resolved in Quebec by Quebecers, but the attitude of English-speaking Canadians is important, he said.

The people of Quebec were concerned about the lack of a vigorous debate among English-speaking Canadians about the future of Canada.

CLEAR STATEMENT

He praised John Diefenbaker for stating clearly his opposition to the theory that Canada has two founding peoples.

"The more clearly English-Canadians make their views known, the better it will be for both sides."

Addressing a luncheon meeting of the National Dairy Council convention, Mr. Ryan said English-speaking Canadians ask what Quebec wants and why Quebec has not responded to help offered by English-Canadians.

PERIOD OF TRIAL

The recent statement by Rene Levesque advocating a separate Quebec will force a lot of people to make their views known, he said.

"We are all conscious that Canada is undergoing a period of trial and post-searching more important in its implications than any of us would have thought three months ago."

Pearson:

No Veto For Company

TORONTO (CP)—Prime Minister Lester Pearson has told Toronto board of control he will not interfere with the Company of Young Canadians.

In answer to a letter written by the board, Mr. Pearson said the company is a largely autonomous agency and not an agency of the Crown.

The board asked Mr. Pearson to send a representative to Toronto to discuss the CYC's function in Yorkville, Toronto's coffee-house district. The move was prompted by a hippie sit-in in the seats of the mayor and controllers during a board meeting last month.

Air Law Imminent

OTTAWA (CP)—State Secretary LaMarsh said Tuesday she expects new broadcasting legislation will go to Parliament early next week. It will change the CBC hierarchy and list new conditions for operation of broadcasting stations.

Manpower, Immigration Advisers

MPs Approve First Major Bill

OTTAWA (CP)—The Liberal government's first major bill of the resumed session of Parliament, establishing a Canada Manpower and Immigration Council, won key approval in principle in the Commons Tuesday—the second day of business.

The bill, which went through by voice vote, sets up a 16-member national council plus four specialized 12-member advisory boards, other similar boards Manpower Minister Marchand may feel are needed, and regional and local advisory committees.

BOTH DENIED

Opposition attacks on the bill centered on claims of patronage in council appointments and of discrimination against immigrants in present manpower programs. Mr. Marchand denied both.

The specialized boards will cover such subjects as adult occupational training, adjustment of immigrants, co-ordination of rehabilitation services for the disabled, and manpower and immigration research.

SEMI-LAR NUMBER

The minister said a similar large number of boards exists under the National Employment Service.

In the first test of voting strength since the summer recess ended, the government defeated a Conservative amendment to the manpower bill 70-61. The Liberals had the support of the Social Credit, Creditiste and New Democratic MPs.

● Labor Minister Nicholson announced plans for a government-sponsored series of regular meetings between senior labor and management representatives in federal industries, starting this fall and winter.

● He said the aim is to promote a three-way discussion of labor relations problems before they reach the critical stage.

● Mr. Nicholson also said his department is trying to develop "an enlarged cadre of highly-skilled and specialized conciliators and mediators equipped to handle the growing volume" of labor disputes.

● Finance Minister Sharp said the government will receive the views of provincial authorities until the end of November in making up its mind on the Carter royal commission proposals on tax reform.

He also said taxpayers—as corporations, associations or individuals—have until the end of October to submit written briefs. But a white paper on the Carter report still is due around year-end.

B.C. Judge Rejects Lengthy Union Suit

VANCOUVER (CP)—A four-year damage suit ended Tuesday in a dismissal when Mr. Justice J. G. Ruttan ruled Local 1 of the Canadian Iron Workers' Union had no claim against the rival International Iron Workers' Union. The local of the Canadian Iron Workers' Union, formed in 1969 in a dispute over discipline, had claimed damages for several alleged acts of intimidation and coercion said to be aimed at scuttling it as a union.

Fog-Collision Victims

Two Ships Mended In Local Shipyards

Contracts for repairing two freighters seriously damaged in a collision in foggy Juan de Fuca Strait last Wednesday have been awarded to the city's two major shipyards.

Spokesmen for Victoria Machinery Depot and Yarrow's were unable to come up with an immediate repair estimate. Both said they would have to wait until the full extent of the damage was disclosed as the damaged parts were stripped from the hulls.

EARLY GUESSES

Early damage estimates while the ships were still in the water ranged upward of $1,000,000.

Yarrow's will put close to 100 men to work on repairs to the bow of the Danish ship Marie Skou. The time the job will take will depend on how much of the ship's bow equipment can be salvaged and how long it will take to replace badly damaged equipment.

At VMD, the repairs on a 20-by-40-foot hole on the side of the Chilean Maru will go around the clock. Work is estimated to take two weeks.

Alumni Aids

Five Pupils

Five district high school graduates of last spring were named Tuesday as winners of $300 scholarships awarded by the University of Victoria Alumni Association to go toward the university's $428 tuition fee.

Winners and their schools are Jennifer Daws, 460 Montclair, Mount View; Nancy Dickson, 24 Midwood, Esquimalt; Mary McCammon, 1032 Craigdarroch, Victoria; Denise Schuetz, 2181 Beacon in Sidney, Claremont and James Titterle, 2420 Nottingham, Oak Bay.

At last there is a fine map of Vancouver Island on one sheet, showing all the main roads and logging roads.

We picked up our copy from the geographic division of the department of lands, forests and water resources last Friday, even before the ink was dry—and we are impressed.

This map details the essential information, for which we carry three or four commercial maps, a dozen or more logging maps, and a score of government maps, to make our exploration trips into the backwoods of Vancouver Island.

Readers of this column who like to follow our trips would be well advised to buy this map, which may be obtained for $1.15, plus 5 percent sales tax, from the Geographic Division, B.C. Lands Service, Legislative Buildings, Victoria, B.C. Order SGS Map No. 1.

This map will also be valuable to use in conjunction with a collection of our outdoors columns, which will be published in book form before Christmas.

The map is produced in 10 colors at a scale of one inch to six miles.

The relief is shown with 1,000-foot contour intervals. A layer tint in green depicts the first 500 feet, with higher elevations shown in progressively darker brown shading.

Planned as a road map for recreationists, fishermen and hunters, only the main roads (both public and private) are shown. These were drawn from the latest air photography and information supplied by logging operators. The public roads are classified in red, while private roads are shown by a double black line.

Our first perusal turned up only one little error. The travelled road shown along the Nitinat River is on the wrong side of the river for a short distance.

Of particular interest to residents and visitors to Vancouver Island will be the historical and geographical notes spotted on the map. Authentic border illustrations were prepared by the provincial museum and depict various Vancouver Island Indian totems and artifacts. Location of shipwrecks along Vancouver Island's rugged west coast are noted.

An inset map at a scale of one inch to two miles supplies more detail concerning Victoria and the Saanich Peninsula.

The geographic division has also finished road revision of the centre westerly section of Vancouver Island on its five-man, one inch to four miles, more-detailed Vancouver Island map series. In February it completed revision of the centre easterly section.

The southern section map is now being revised and the northern eastern section of the island is still to be revised. Still to be published is the fifth map taking in the northern tip of Vancouver Island.

Rangy-tang duck hunters who pot at everything they see, in whichever direction they see it, and no matter how far out of range, are responsible for the loss of one of this area's better duck shooting spots.

Billings, or Jackson's Spit, between Sooke Basin and Sooke Harbor has been closed to shooting, with boundaries the cable markers on both shores, easterly to Hill Head in East Sooke, and back across to the cable crossing marker in the little park at the end of Kaituma Road, to create a triangle taking in the whole of the spit and about 200 yards on either side.

Residents had asked for closure of all of Sooke Basin and Sooke Harbor, because houses were being pelted with birdshot. They have got Billings's Spit closed. If hunters are not careful the other areas may be closed.

The Royal Roads shooting preserve which takes in all of Esquimalt Lagoon to Albert Head, to Latoria Road, along Metchosin Road to Sooke Road has been extended to take in all of Glen Lake and the old potato farm at the easterly end of Langford Lake. It now runs along Sooke Road and from Braden Road to the CPR railway tracks and westerly along the railway tracks to the Esquimalt District border, which takes in all of Langford Lake. No shooting at all is permitted in this area.

Ducks and geese become fair game Oct. 7.

Hospital Costs

Taxpayer
In Dark
Till 1968

By JOHN MATTERS

Taxpayers in the Greater Victoria area will have to wait three or four months before they find out how many millions should be spent improving their hospital facilities.

"Early in 1968" was the word from most sources when they were asked Tuesday when the Agnew Peckham report is expected to offer a solution to the district's hospital problems.

The Toronto-based firm of hospital consultants is being paid by the municipalities and the provincial government to make a study of Greater Victoria's long-range health needs.

BURY SUMMER

Their experts have been coming and going from Victoria all summer, and Dr. Harvey Agnew, president of the firm, is expected here in October.

Dr. Peter Hart and Garth Pierce, two of the consultants involved in the study, were in the city last week, when they had a meeting with hospital officials and other medical authorities.

'FEW KITES'

"They flew a few kites, but as yet there is nothing firm," said one informant.

The Agnew Peckham firm, which is being paid $40,000 for the survey, was asked to produce a preliminary report within six months and follow that with a final report.

LAST FIRST

However, people close to their activities point out that this was something like asking the experts to produce the final chapter of a report before the other chapters had been finished.

The result, it now appears, is that the preliminary report will be a much clearer appraisal of hospital needs than was first expected.

SUPPORTING DATA

It will be followed by a second report, but this will mainly consist of supporting data for the initial study.

The study will deal extensively with Greater Victoria's acute-care bed needs. The lack of acute-care beds is one reason patients are being booked for months in advance by St. Joseph's and Royal Jubilee Hospitals.

In that vein, the Agnew Peckham study is expected to suggest a new acute-care centre in the Elm Lake area or in Central Saanich.

Coun. J. D. Watts of Oak Bay is "actively considering" making the reeve's race at least a two-way contest this year, he said Tuesday.

Reeve Allen Cox is not seeking another term, and Coun. Fred Haines said he will resign his seat to take part in the contest.

Coun. Frances Elford quashed speculation that she will seek the reeve's race, and said she would be looking for re-election as a councillor.

She did not discount the idea that she might run for the reeve's race in the future, but said that if other councillors were running it would mean council would have too many experienced members at once if she was also a contender.

Three in Esquimalt

Former Radioman
Council Candidate

Larry Cross, 655 Grenville, a former radio newscaster and now a furniture salesman, confirmed Tuesday he will be a candidate for election to Esquimalt council this year.

"I've seen other councils in action, and I've seen this one in action," he said.

"I've talked to a lot of people in my profession as a newsman and have formed an opinion of this council on the basis of that."

POLITICAL ISSUES

Mr. Cross said he felt that too many council members have been treating problems as political rather than community issues.

"I want to see members who talk as councilmen first and politicians second," he observed. "There are now three announced candidates for the three seats which will become vacant this year."

Coun. Gerald Horne will be looking for a third term, "I think I've represented the people in a responsible way," he said.

MORE COMMITTEES

"I've enjoyed working on the fire committee this year, and I've also worked on public works and parks. I would like to get on other committees."

Coun. Roy Elphick will also be seeking re-election, while Coun. Arthur Mels will vacate his seat to contest the reeve's race with Reeve Ray Bryant.

Key Year for Appeal

Victoria Must Put Up
—Or Shut Up

Failure to reach the United Appeal goal of $600,000 this year will mean Victorians will be faced with numerous small appeals in the future, United Appeal chairman G. F. Auchinleck warned Tuesday.

He was addressing some 130 community leaders at a breakfast meeting to kick off this year's appeal.

"This is a critical year in the United Appeal — the year in which we must put up or shut up, so to speak," he said.

AGENCIES NOW 23

For the first time, the Red Cross has joined the United campaign, and two more agencies have brought the number of red feather organizations to 23.

The over-all goal for the Red Cross-Red Feather appeal has increased from $52,000 last year.

"It's a one-third increase no matter how you cut it, and in some ways it's a frightening prospect," said Mr. Auchinleck.

BACK UP FAITH

"Success in reaching our $600,000 goal by Oct. 30 will prove that you and I and everyone else who thinks that this is a wonderful place in which we live are willing to back up our faith with what to each of us individually is really only a small sacrifice."

He pointed out that in other parts of Canada a joint appeal had traditionally received the full support of the community.

"Failure this year would not only pour down the drain the work of a number of dedicated people who strongly believe in a truly United Appeal, but would also inevitably start a reverse trend in the number of appeals in Greater Victoria, which I am convinced no one really wants."

Citing increased donations to the pre-campaign appeal, Mr. Auchinleck said he was sure the general public was behind the new truly United Appeal.

Mayor Hugh Stephen and reeves and mayors of surrounding areas attended the meeting, as well as local businessmen, labor representatives, provincial and federal government representatives and members of service organizations.

A donation to the appeal, said Mayor Stephen, is the subscription all should pay to belong to the civilized world.

SENSE OF JUSTICE

"It is the price we have to pay so that this community during the coming 12 months will be able to go on with a full sense of social justice," said the mayor.

He welcomed the move of the Red Cross in joining the joint appeal as a significant event.

The campaign will be swinging into high gear with special meetings and film shows in local business offices.

The residential canvass will begin Oct. 15.

Drugs Topic

LSD and Psychotropic Drugs will be the topic of Dr. G. P. Evans, deputy Greater Victoria public health officer, at the Victoria Rotary Club luncheon meeting at noon Thursday.

Princess Makes
Flowers Bloom

By IAN STREET

There were more flowers in the speeches than in the bouquets Tuesday as Victoria continued its enthusiastic welcome of Denmark's Princess Margrethe.

It seemed at times as if civic and provincial politicians were trying to outdo each other in compliments to the 27-year-old heir to the Danish throne and her husband, Prince Henrik.

Mayor Hugh Stephen set the tone in his speech to a gathering of civic leaders and members of the local Danish community in the council chamber of City Hall.

He told the princess:

"It is, if I may say so, Ma'am, a particular delight that in the late summer of our celebrations, when already the more sombre colors of fall and winter are apparent, you should visit us and through your youth and beauty bring us again a fresh and vibrant mood of early springtime."

The mayor wound up his speech with a phrase borrowed from Shakespeare: "We welcome to this council chamber this morning 'the beautiful majesty of Denmark.'"

Attorney-General Bonner, in his brief address to a government luncheon in honor of the Danish royal couple at the Empress Hotel, was not to be outdone.

He said 2,000,000 British Columbians, "who are asked for their eye for beauty," consider that the natural beauty of this province has been greatly enhanced by the presence of Princess Margrethe.

Mr. Bonner presented the princess with a dogwood brooch as a memento, adding gallantly, "A beautiful flower appropriate for a beautiful princess."

Prince Henrik, whose good looks and friendly manner earlier caused quite a stir among the ladies at the Silver Threads Recreation Centre, received a plaque hand-carved from yellow cedar, bearing the B.C. coat-of-arms.

At City Hall the royal couple was presented with a plate carrying the city's crest and a copy of Fenwick Lansdowne's book, Birds of the Northern Forest.

Princess Margrethe spoke briefly on both occasions and made presentations of books on life in the Scandinavian countries.

She told the luncheon gathering that her stay in B.C. was short but "exceedingly interesting and exceedingly pleasant, especially in Victoria."

"We have been touched by the many kind words concerning Danish people who have built a new life here and who have become happy and attached to this country. We are proud to be their countrymen."

A group of Danish Canadians gathered around the princess and her party in Centennial Square, calling in Danish for three cheers and shouting, "Long Live the Princess!"

The attorney-general, who represented the absent Premier Bennett, invited Princess Margrethe to return to B.C. on an archaeological expedition to probe sites where evidence that man lived here at least 9,000 years ago has been unearthed.

He wished the royal couple Godspeed and a safe journey home, adding, "I hope you visit us again one day soon." Princess Margrethe and her husband flew to Vancouver Tuesday afternoon to begin a private visit that takes them to Tahiti today, Gold River for the opening of the new pulp mill Thursday and back to Vancouver late Friday.

Three More Added
To Visitors' Parade

Three more distinguished visitors will be in Victoria soon, it was learned Tuesday.

C. K. Yen, vice-president and prime minister of Nationalist China, will visit Canada from Oct. 4 to 14, beginning his visit in Vancouver ending in Victoria.

Chief Scout of the Commonwealth, Sir Charles Maclean, will arrive in Victoria Oct. 3, and leave again Oct. 5.

The Duke of Devonshire, chairman of the Royal Commonwealth Society, will pay a brief visit Nov. 2.

Architect Next
For Centre

Saanich council will probably appoint an architect Monday night for the $100,000 senior citizens' activity centre near Hampton Park.

The centre is the second of four projects set out in the $1,250,000 recreation referendum approved by ratepayers last spring. Architects are already designing the Tillicum arena. Saanich's special projects committee has reviewed proposals from architects and a recommendation will be made to a full meeting of council Monday night, chairman Coun. Edith Cuning said.

Centennial Project

Tugs' Story Colorful

Island Tug and Barge, one of the largest transportation companies of its kind in Canada has completed its Centennial project.

The Victoria-based firm has produced a colorful booklet called Ocean Highway, which in its 58 pages describes not only ITB but the history of all tug operations in British Columbia's coastal waters.

"When we described the manner in which Island Tug has progressed since its start in 1925, we urge you to think as well of our contemporaries in this 'lifeline industry' of towboating, who have faced the same challenges and have kept pace with a province deeply involved in the development of its considerable potential," says the foreword.

It describes how Harold B. Ewerty started his company with one tug — the Island Planet. Today it has more than 120 wooden scows and barges alone.

Printed in Vancouver, the book generously uses color photographs and drawings to convey its message.

A company spokesman said Ocean Highway is going out to a restricted mailing list and is not for sale. Copies will be sent to public libraries.

"The idea sort of evolved," he explained. "We were looking for something that would tell the story of Island Tug, and it grew into something of historical reference on the whole industry."

Indian Holy Man Talks of Hippies

By EILEEN LEAROLD

No one can quite figure out where everybody sat, but during Maharishi's talk at Central Junior High School last week—he is the Indian holy man who lured the Beatles away from LSD—an announcement was made that the janitor counted 3,000 people in the auditorium.

Considering the Royal Theatre, stacked, holds 1,800, that's a lot of interest.

A third of the audience seemed to be under the age of 20.

Many had hippie-length hair. But they came to hear a man who had longer hair than they did—obviously the sort of person they think they are emulating. With flowers, and beads.

Where did the hippies come from? What kind of a social revolution produced them? Most of all—what does it all mean to concerned parents and the average spectator in the street to whom taking drugs is a further-out idea than flying saucers.

Right here in Victoria, more middle-class parents than would care to admit it, are viewing their teenagers with alarm. With Susan, age 14, leave home and join a commune? Son John has already taken to wearing bizarre clothing and informed his parents he can't "relate" to them, they don't "communicate" and sneered at his father's nine-to-five job.

Most parents I have talked to seem totally confused by the "revolution." They don't know how to handle it because criticism lower your standard of living which produced such stress, or get rid of the stress. Meditation will remove the stress. The mind follows the pattern of the body, and the nervous system follows the pattern of the mind.

Q: But many people say they work better under stress and that a certain amount of suffering is good for one.

A: Stress means that activity will be weak. If you cannot carry a full load, it is not that the load is too great, but that the goat is weak.

"If to maintain a high standard of living, a man is tired to death, then that life is in great loss. Life is for living.

Suffering? If we cannot remove the darkness of the room, then we begin praising the dark. A weak mind is like the weak goat, then suffering comes, but it is not good and not necessary.

Q: I heard a boy say that youth was immortal, but that he had felt death and suffering.

A: Life is neither mortal or immortal alone. The outer life is variable, always changing, subject to death. Inner life is immortal and bliss. Life is a composite of the two. Youth is the full bloom of life.

Thorns will dominate before a rose comes to full bloom. When the flower is full, thorns no more dominate.

"In relative life, the changes have to be. But bliss consciousness can dominate the relative field through meditation—then death itself is no blow and suffering will be secondary. It is a matter of which dominates.

Q: Some hippies say that drugs such as LSD are an initial aid to transcendental consciousness, or bliss.

A: Drugs leave a bad scar on the nervous system. It is a waste of life. I have heard the miserable effects of LSD. At the time of taking it some say it is a relief from ordinary living, but a greater misery comes afterwards, so it is no relief at all.

Drugs are artificial. They influence only the psychological side of the personality which over-excites the emotions. Anything which unduly excites the emotions usually suppresses the intellect. It is unbalanced. We want to develop the intellect and mind.

Man has the ability to reach the field of Being, the source of thought which is a reservoir of energy and intelligence.

Q: Are you a mystic?

A: Meditation is the bridge between physics and metaphysics. Because I talk of "Being" I am labelled a mystic! Each age has its own language. In medieval times it was all talk of faith and mysticism and no questions asked or a man was called a heretic. What I speak of now is thought energy. Nothing of mysticism. In order to make the mind strong we have to enlarge it. The goat will carry a great load if he is strong.

Q: A lot of hippies chant. Is that useful?

A: Chanting is only on the thinking level. It might make one drowsy. But it is grosser than speaking and less than thinking.

Q: Many people say that meditation is a withdrawal from the world.

A: If a man is running to the bank, it might be interpreted that he is running away from the market. Leaving the world is no answer. One can live in the world and meditate. A bee gets honey from a flower without damaging the petals. The Relative and Absolute can be lived together. One cannot subside desires to be spiritual; people talk of "giving up," but how can one who has no ability to fulfill his desires, speak of giving up desire? The world is important and so is the physical structure, and one does not have to abstain from the world to attain bliss.

Our happiness and our unhappiness is our own doing.

Q: The children who came to hear you in Victoria—many carried flowers, as you do. What do you think of it all?

A: Flowers express beauty and harmony, but it is the activity of the children that matters. If they use odd clothing and flowers as an excuse to lie about on the streets, it is useless. The life of a real ascetic is filled with action.

Q: But they say they are helping others.

A: How can a poor bank make loans? We must help these children to become stronger for their own sake and for the sake of the generations to come. There is an unlimited ocean of strength within and they must find it.

Maharishi

drives the children further away, and yet obviously they can't condone a behavior they do not understand.

In the interests of some kind of enlightenment on the subject, I had a long interview with Maharishi who travels with the purpose of teaching his system of transcendental meditation.

Q: Why are children turning away from their parents? Is it a good or a bad thing?

A: Abandonment has no place in the field of realization. The children are confused.

I take this manifestation of irresponsible behavior on the part of youth, as a cry from nature, a protest. We cannot ignore it for it is happening all over the world. Their odd behavior is actually a cry of appeal from youth to those responsible for their well-being.

Q: Are the activities of the hippies a sign of some kind of evolutionary progress? Many seem to think so.

A: No. When the young drop out of school, resign their chances for education and ignore all responsibilities, it must be viewed with alarm. What it means is that they have a weak nervous system and this poor constitution has been gained from the stress and strain of their parents. The mother and father have produced weak children who cannot take responsibility. Therefore, the parents must learn to live so that stress does not accumulate.

Q: Many parents might not like that answer.

A: But it is true. There is too much tension in the world. Look at Sweden where they have the highest standard of living in the world, and also the highest suicide rate. I told them in Sweden, "either you must

Heirloom Gold Bracelet For 'Something Old'

A wedding of wide interest in Ottawa and Victoria took place in St. Luke's Anglican Church when Cheryl Ann Cundance, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. G. M. Cundance, 3711 Woodburn Avenue, Victoria, became the bride of Sub-Lt. John Lewis Orr, RCN, son of Mr. and Mrs. John L. Orr of Ottawa.

Pink and white chrysanthemums were teamed with white plaid ribbons to decorate the church. Lt. Col. R. O. Wilkes officiated and organist was Richard Proudman.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a full-length gown of corded silk featuring lace on the bodice and cascading down the front of the slim skirt. The gown had blue at the shoulders accented the detachable court train. Her hand-crocheted veil of silk illusion coronet of seed pearls. Sweetheart roses highlighted the white chiffon muffs she carried.

For 'something old' she wore a gold bracelet that had belonged to her great-grandmother. Miss Barbara Gay Cundance was maid of honor for her sister. Bridesmaid was Miss Wendy Hatcher and flower girl, Karen Cundance, the bride's niece. All wore full-length A-line gowns of aqua pearly elegance and toning headpieces. The senior attendants carried pink carnations and white spider chrysanthemums in their bouquets. The flower girl's colonial bouquet was in similar motif.

Best man was Lieut. Douglas Hall, RCA, and ushers were the principals' brothers, Malcolm Orr and Sidney Cundance. Soloist was Peter Dyson.

A reception followed in the Officers' Mess of the Fifth B.C. Field Battery in the Bay Street Armoury.

Trevor Barlow proposed the toast to his cousin. Sweetheart roses and silver candelabra decorated the head table which was highlighted with a three-tier wedding cake, topped with pink roses.

Among the out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. John L. Orr, Mr. and Mrs. B. L. Cundance, Mr. and Mrs. K. M. Cundance, Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Williams, Mr. and Mrs. C. Conmort, Mr. and Mrs. P. G. Nichol, Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Manville, Miss Christine Cundance, Miss Anne Harold, Bill Ritchie and Malcolm Orr.

White Velvet Trims French Lace Gown

Her grandmother's ring was the "something old" talisman for Teresa Colleen Buchanan when she became the bride of William Arthur Alexander in Gorge Trinity Presbyterian Church.

Following bridal tradition she wore pearl earrings, a gift of the groom, for "something new," her mother's pearls were "something borrowed" and a blue lace garter "something blue."

The bride was lovely in a gown of white French lace styled on empire lines, with softly rounded neckline and three-quarter sleeves piped with white German velvet. A large velvet bow swept from the waistline to the floor. A triple-pleat veil misted from a headpiece of chiffon and fabric roses.

Parents of the principals are Mr. and Mrs. K. Buchanan, 1192 Munro Street, and Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Alexander, 2833 Agincourt Road.

Rev. Gilbert Smith officiated at the ceremony. Mr. K. Buchanan gave his daughter in marriage.

Attendants of the bride were gowned alike in floor-length empire line sheaths of chiffon and taffeta. Fabric roses decorated the waistline and the sleeves were three-quarter length. Their illusion net veils misted from headpieces of roses. Accessories were a single strand of pearls, gift of the bride, and pearl earrings. They carried cascade bouquets of white carnations tipped in coral.

Miss Jane Gillingham was maid of honor and bridesmaids were the Misses Debbie Johnston and Pat Roskamp.

Little flower girl Marlene Chalk wore a dress styled like those of the senior attendants. Mike Gregory acted as best man. Guests were ushered by Jim Wilson and Dave Russell.

At the reception following in Holyrood House the head table was centred by a three-tier wedding cake, topped with coral roses.

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: What do you think of a 80-year-old man who buried his wife 11 years ago, and is now going steady with a lady friend?

Gramps was always a person who saved his money. Suddenly he has taken to buying sports jackets and shoes with buckles instead of laces. He gets the best seats to the concerts and plays and he never misses a football or a basketball game. He didn't do any of these things 40 years ago when it would have made some sense.

I am a relative and am very concerned about his foolishness. How can we get it across to Gramps that he should be saving his money for his old age so in case he becomes feeble and incapacitated he will not be a burden to his family? Thank you.—WORRIED FAMILY

Dear Family: Sorry, but I am not going to tell a man who is 80 to save money for his old age. It sounds as if Gramps is just beginning to get a kick out of life and I say hooray for him! If you want to do him a favor, make sure he has his supplemental medicare paid up and tell him to enjoy himself.

Dear Ann Landers: When I was 13 I hated my mother. Almost all my girl friends were allowed to date, but I had to wait till I got into the 10th grade. I was humiliated and ashamed. I accused her of trying to keep me a baby all my life. We had some terrible arguments but I couldn't get her to budge.

Complexion Beauty

The secret of beautifying the complexion is said to lie in the saturation of the skin with a new type of tropical moist oil. The skin takes on an immediate healthy bloom as the tiny lines and blemishes are gently smoothed away. This saturation treatment with the moist oil of Olax is recommended by skin care consultants, who advise its daily use as a powder base to give the complexion day-long beauty. Your druggist will help you to obtain a supply for your personal needs.

This delightful smile from a gracious royal princess will long be remembered by young Doreen Norgaard. The 11-year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. Norgaard of 2631 Millstream Road presented flowers to Crown Princess Margrethe on behalf of the Danish community of Victoria, on her arrival at City Hall Tuesday morning. Doreen who is a studious little girl in Grade 6 at Savory School, practised her curtsy with her mother in preparation for this big day from the moment she was invited to make the presentation. Doreen and her parents were among Victoria Danish people who met the lovely crown princess at a reception at City Hall.

The brief, two-day visit to Victoria of Princess Margrethe, future queen of Denmark, and her husband, Prince Henrik, ended with a government luncheon at the Empress Hotel Tuesday afternoon. The talented and vivacious 27-year-old princess and Prince Henrik visited Victoria as part of a royal visit to Expo 67 and Western Canada. They are shown here during their Tuesday morning visit to City Hall where they received a warm welcome from Mayor Hugh Stephen and other dignitaries. Also on hand to greet the lovely princess at City Hall were a number of Danish Canadians.

Ottawa Lawyer Maintains Professional Women Equal

By MARILYN ARGUE

OTTAWA (CP) — Lawyer Janet Scott says a sweeping investigation such as envisaged for the royal commission on the status of women is "ridiculous." It might be justified in certain areas, but for professional women it's "completely unnecessary," she maintains, adding that professional women are already equal.

Miss Scott, a tall, attractive woman of 42, looks even more equal than most as she sits in the carpeted office of the chairman of the immigration appeals board. She was appointed to the position in mid-August, leaving a Toronto job as editor-in-chief of Canada's largest law publishers, Carswell Co. Ltd., where she worked more than four years.

A graduate of the University of Toronto law school, she practised with another woman lawyer for 11 years. The firm enjoyed a good practice and encountered no male prejudice, she says.

"People did think it strange but they were more intrigued than anything else."

"A woman is just another member of her profession. If law, there may be other conditions which would make the board decide to grant his appeal."

The chairmanship will mean travelling because the board holds hearings at ports of entry from Halifax to Vancouver.

"After a month in the law course I wouldn't have done anything else. Being a lawyer is intellectually very stimulating. There's almost unlimited variety within the profession and I like dealing with people."

She was attracted to the immigration appeals board for the same reasons. "Here you're really dealing with people's lives."

The board rules on appeals by persons ordered deported or those who have been denied permission to sponsor an immigrant.

"The board will have wide discretionary powers on humanitarian grounds. Even though a person may not have a case according to the facts of

Garden Notes

More About Dahlias

By M. V. Chesnut

In yesterday's column I gave some details on when and how to take up dahlia roots for winter storage, but because of space limitations I could give only a sketchy outline. Today I would like to go over the ground again explaining one or two points a bit more fully.

First, should the clumps of dahlia roots be stored whole or cut up into individual tubers before storing?

There are some solid advantages in dividing them: for one thing, individual tubers take up a lot less storage space than whole clumps. Trouble is, the dividing has to be done in a certain way, and the novice can horse up a lot of valuable dahlias if he makes his cuts in the wrong places. It is safer to divide in the spring after the tubers have started to sprout — you can't go too far wrong if you make sure each division has a healthy shoot sprouting from it. If storage space is limited, though, and you'd like to take a crack at dividing your clumps, this is how to go about it:

A dahlia clump, as dug from the garden, consists of a central stem, and radiating outward from this stem are the individual tubers, each one looking rather like a skinny sweet potato. Each one of these, cut away from the central stem, is capable of making a plant on its own next year.

The important part of a dahlia tuber is its neck — the thin end where it joins the central stem. This is the point where it will sprout next year, and it is VERY important to retain all this neck when the tuber is cut free from the clump. You see, a dahlia tuber is something like a seed potato with only one eye; if anything happens to that eye, the potato won't grow. Neither will the dahlia. Make sure, then, that you have ALL the neck when cutting a tuber free from the clump.

Another important point is the labelling, and there is more to this than meets the eye. If you store your tubers unlabelled and plant up your bed next spring with a hodgepodge of unidentified bulbs, you may wind up with all the tall ones in front and all the shorties in the back row where you can't see them. If you store in clumps, wire a wooden plant label to the stub of stem. If you divide, a very good way is to write the name of each dahlia directly on its skin with an India ink marking pen.

In yesterday's article I recommended storing dahlia tubers in cardboard cartons between layers of peat moss or vermiculite, and this may seem an unnecessary expense to some readers. I would say this: If you have a proper root cellar, dugout, or other storage place where potatoes will keep in good condition all winter without either sprouting or freezing, then you can get away with storing your dahlias just as you store your potatoes. Otherwise, some sort of covering is necessary.

Over the years, I have tried dipping the tubers in hot wax, spraying them with Wild-Pruf liquid plastic, sealing them in plastic bags and burying them in damp sand as you would carrots, always with less satisfactory results than plunging them in peat moss or vermiculite.

These materials are not overly expensive — about $2.25 for an enormous sack containing 4 cubic feet of vermiculite, of $4.75 for a giant bale of peat moss. My thought on the expense is this:

If you are going to buy peat or vermiculite for the garden next spring, buy it this fall instead. It isn't money down the drain, for after your dahlias are taken out and planted next spring, you still have your peat or vermiculite, either for using again or for its dozen and one uses in the garden. These materials are grand for starting seeds, rooting slips, mixing into houseplant soil mixtures, for improving the soil texture in outdoor beds and planters, and even for improving the lawn.

STAN DELAPLANE Likes the British Touch

Our TV Lacks Mystery

The new TV season is on and the days are getting shorter. I wish they would get some murder mysteries. Lot of murder on the tube but not much mystery.

I like those things where the Inspector from Scotland Yard arrives at Scotland Yard. The Squire is stiff and stark on the library floor. The butler has a shifty look.

"And you, Lady Hawkesbury," says the Inspector. "My job is to get at the bottom of all this. Now, I suggest that everyone go to bed. Time enough in the morning."

"I was giving myself a manicure," says the Lady. "I've eaten gelatine until I'm all quivery, but nothing seems to help my nails."

These are British-made films. They leave us quivery as gelatine in all its delicious flavors.

The Scotland Yard man is polite as butter. Sharp as cheddar cheese.

"Lord Hawkesbury," he says. "May I inquire why you are carrying that smoking Webley revolver?"

"I was shooting a brace of plover, old boy," says the Lord. "Always like a few plover for breakfast, what?"

"At 2 o'clock in the morning," asks the Inspector with a sly smile.

"I get hungry in the middle of the night," says his Lordship. "See here, my man, are you insinuating—"

"I insinuate nothing," says the Inspector. "My job is to get at the bottom of all this. Now, I suggest that everyone go to bed. Time enough in the morning."

Outside in the fog, a caped figure is climbing the ivy... Eeeeeek!

We don't get much of this on TV. Plenty of murder. But no question whodunit. You see it in gaudy color. Every horrid blow—ugh! Every ghastly wince—ouch!

We don't like our violence as violent. "You rat!" Pistol blow on the head. "All right, you varmint. Yore time has come!" Bang! Bullet right through the brisquet.

On our big tube, people die horribly and explicitly. Give me the English Squire, modestly face down on the library rug. Just a flash to establish the crime.

Says the Inspector to the butler: "Now Whipstitch, let's have the whole story. Had a spot of bother once out in the Far East, I believe."

"Oh, sir," says Whipstitch. "I beg you not to tell his Lordship. I did me time for it."

"P'raps you'd like to tell me why this Borsario blowgun was found in your room then?" Says Whipstitch: "I had it altered to a pea shooter, sir. Just for a bit of larking about."

Blows and blood pour out of our screen. If there's a mystery, it winds up with the mystery man getting his head knocked off. Thump! Thump! (And serves him right for being mysterious.)

No wonder the commercial is for aspirin.

"Headache nagging you?" You said it, Claude. Everytime the Bad Guy gets jolted, I get a sympathetic headache.

Before TV, I was raised on A. Conan Doyle. "I see you've already had breakfast, Doctor."

"How on earth would you know that, Sherlock Holmes?" "Quite simple, Doctor. You've got a bit of egg on your lip."

There was little violence in those stories. Sherlock Holmes simply solved the mystery. And the Inspector said: "Come along, my man. No nonsense now."

It was simple fare. Approved by parents and the young reader.

"Don't read in that light," said my grandma. "You'll ruin your eyes."

"It was the really nephew," said the Inspector lighting his pipe. "Suspected it myself when I found him putting the body in the fridge."

"Now why would he be doing that at 4 in the morning?" I asked myself.

The Little World of SHEILAH GRAHAM

Caine Good Guy, But...

HOLLYWOOD (NANA) — "You must be in love with Michael Caine," everyone says to me. "You write about him so often." On my honor, no. Michael is a good guy to interview, but to be in love with? Never! The latest girl on his arm in Europe, Shirley Bassey... Lester Cowan called to say he's starting from scratch again with The Last Tycoon. Warren Beatty and Paul Newman have both said they would like to play Stahl. Lester, however, has an unknown up his capacious sleeves. And wouldn't Lee Marvin be good for Brady, (the crooked movie tycoon)? Lester is also talking to Lee about playing the man in F. Scott Fitzgerald's script of Babylon Revisited. Cowan paid the late author $4,000 for the screenplay. It was to have starred Carry Grant and Shirley Temple, then 11 years old.

Modest Tommy Steele told me after completing the film version of his Half a Sixpence, "I don't feel I'm an international star yet. Walt Disney told me when I signed to make a film for him, 'You know why we gave Mary Poppins to Dick Van Dyke? He was better known at the time than either you or Julie Andrews.'" From the way Paramount executives rushed out to buy stock after seeing the almost-put-together Half a Sixpence, Tommy might be better known soon than either of them.

When Peyton Place star Ryan O'Neal was on the Mike Douglas show recently, he put him in the telephone and told him to convince a total stranger to become the president of his fan club, in one minute flat. The call was rigged. The girl on the other end of the line, disguising her childish treble, was Mia Farrow. When Ryan asked the former Peyton Place, "are you a member of any other fan club?" she giggled and said, "yes, but the man is someone older."

Frankie is due in New York any day not to start filming The Detective. With his new teeth in, I have an idea he won't be threatening anyone for a long, long time. (I can almost hear him saying, "oh yeah!")

"We didn't want to use the Mata Hari title for our musical," Vincente Minnelli explained on the phone, "because it was used by Greta Garbo and Jeanne Marais." "But those were movies," I protested. "I don't like the new title, Peacocks. 'We're changing it,'" said Vincente, adding, "we might go back to Mata Hari. He had convinced Ricardo Montalban for the lead with Marlene Dietrich, 'but he was tied up. We're happy with Pernell Roberts, who sings like an angel.'" — Camelot and The King and I on the road. Roberts is a former star of Bonanza.

And while we're on the road, please, someone ask Greer Garson to co-star with Walter Slezak in The Lion in Winter. Greer was mad keen to play the part on Broadway but it went to Rosemary Harris.

From now on, says Richard Burton, he will act in his own productions only. Of course he is a partner with Elizabeth Taylor, the current Geoffrey, which has been stalled a bit by poor weather in Sardinia.

SYDNEY HARRIS

Although envy is not one of my many vices—for which I thank the Lord—there is one kind of temperament that invariably makes me envious.

Flying to give a lecture recently, I spent a tedious hour on a bus taking me from the airport to my hotel downtown. The man in the seat next to me had no sooner sat down than he dropped off to sleep, and did not awaken until we reached our destination.

I was murderous with envy—as I always am on such occasions. This capacity to drop off, for 20 minutes or an hour, seems to be a gift of the gods. Whenever I try it, however, I meet with utter failure.

No matter how tired I may be, the moment I try to doze off, on a couch or in a reclining seat, my mind snaps wide awake. And please do not tell me it is a "habit"—for I have tried to cultivate this habit for years.

On those few occasions when I have been so haunted that I have managed to sleep, I awaken feeling wretched and nightmarish, as though I have just stepped out of the fourth dimension. And it is extremely difficult for me to get to sleep that night.

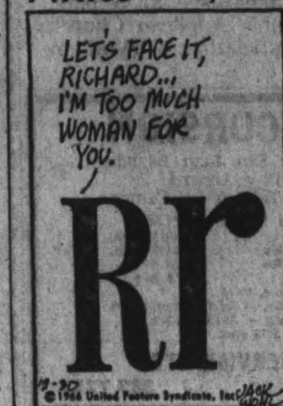

There can be no doubt that those fortunate temperaments who are able to doze off at will have an immense advantage over the rest of us. They are husbanding their nervous energy and are actually able to have two days in one—before the nap and after.

But there can be no doubt that the climate and the pace of our society strongly affect our sleeping habits. The two-hour afternoon siesta in South America and similar climates is a general custom, regardless of type or temperament.

PIXIES By Wohl

Spending a winter in Mexico some years ago, I went to the bank to draw out some money—forgetting that it was closed from 12 to 2. Not wanting to make another trip, I simply sat on the steps, leaned against the wall, and fell asleep for an hour—just as everyone else was doing. I napped every afternoon from then on.

Back home, however, I immediately reverted to my high-strung type, even though my pattern of work permits me to nap if I cared to—or could.

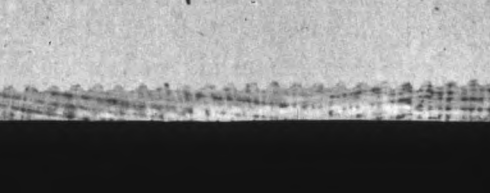

If anyone knows a reliable prescription (short of drugs) for becoming a 20-minute snoozer, I should be eternally grateful to learn about it. And I promise to pass it on to millions of others who are aching to take a nap—until they actually lie down.

Tijuana Poison Sought

TIJUANA, Mexico (AP)—The death toll from a mysterious mass poisoning affecting mostly children rose higher Tuesday as scientists worked to discover the killer agent.

Thirteen have died and 200 persons were in hospital, some in critical condition. Two of the deaths were reported Tuesday. The outbreak began Monday when hundreds of children in this city of 255,000 on the U.S. border were hit by vomiting and nausea. Hospitals quickly were jammed with suffering tots and a few adults.

MEDICAL VIEW
In San Diego, Calif., across the border, where health officials were asked to try to isolate the poison, the county health director, Dr. J. B. Askew, said:

"The symptoms indicate an acute food poisoning caused by either chemicals or bacteria, but we cannot say at this point what it is. There is no indication that it is anything but food poisoning."

Dr. Askew's office tested tissue specimens, milk and water. Other specimens were sent to the state agriculture department in Sacramento, Calif., to see whether pesticides were involved.

STILL SEARCH
Tijuana milk is pasteurized, Dr. Askew said.

"We are analysing it in the search for heavy metals, such as lead, zinc or arsenic," he said. "While we don't know if it is a chemical or bacterial poison, we are leaning more toward the chemical theory at this time. But if it is a chemical it must be a very potent one."

POVERTY AREA
Earlier, authorities questioned about 20 dairy operators, store owners and vendors in search for the source of the outbreak.

Most of the children ranged in age from one to 11, and most of them came from Colonia Libertad, a poverty area where thousands live in makeshift shanties.

Hospitals were jammed. In some cases two children occupied the same bed.

Tree-Top Air Rescue Ends 58-Day Terror

MANILA (Reuters)—A Philippine air force helicopter, on orders from President Marcos, Tuesday plucked a 48-year-old farmer from a 60-foot tree-top perch where he lived for 58 days to dodge a village lynch mob.

Quirino Berja fought and kicked as a doctor swung down from the helicopter and grabbed him. But he was hauled aboard and whisked off to hospital. He was hardly able to straighten his legs.

Berja crouched atop a palm tree for 58 days, terrified that villagers he quarrelled with at his daughter's wedding would murder him if he came down. He said he saw one of his sons murdered at the foot of the tree a week after he climbed up it. Two men arrested in connection with the son's death are out on bail.

Witchcraft Charge Denied

Dead Girl Canon's Daughter

TORONTO (CP)—Canon Moore Smith, denying witchcraft was practised at his downtown church, Monday described the frail 18-year-old girl who died last June 21 in the church rectory as "my own beautiful daughter."

He said the girl, Katherine Globe, was treated seven times at Toronto Western Hospital for an ear infection in the month before her death. An autopsy showed she died of a brain abscess and meningitis developing from an ear infection.

An inquest, due to start today, was ordered by Coroner Dr. H. B. Cotnam after he received reports that a spirit-healing cult was active at Canon Smith's parish.

Mr. Smith, rector of St. Matthias Anglican Church, said in an interview the girl was an adopted daughter and fiancée of his son David, 26.

The girl was found dead in a second-floor room at the rectory by her brother Alex, 24, who had been summoned by Mr. Smith.

"There has been a great deal of misrepresentation and misstatement of fact concerning me and my church," Mr. Smith said.

He and others had prayed with Katherine when she was ill to restore her to health but he denied any special rites or ceremonies were involved.

"It is our belief that an illness is caused by Satan, so we prayed for her, but always in the context of the Anglican church."

"It is utterly false to say there were spankings or anything like that."

Rt. Rev. George B. Snell, Anglican Bishop of Toronto, ordered the canon Sept. 1 to abandon meetings of a group which he said apparently tried to develop a method to drive evil spirits from distressed persons.

Later, in a statement outlining the theological basis for his beliefs that illness can be cured by prayer, Canon Smith said:

"We hold categorically to God's will for good, for wholeness in His world. He has many valid channels for healing and one of them is the church."

Schools Resemble Penal Institutions Bunn Tells Trustees

A Victoria school trustee said Tuesday many schools today are operated along the lines of mild penal institutions where warden teachers call the roll and equipment is arranged to suit the janitor.

Peter Bunn made the remark in an address at the annual convention of the Canadian School Trustees Association in Saskatoon.

Schools, he said, should be given back to the students.

Mr. Bunn said "pupil-oriented" schools should be designed to provide the best possible teaching and learning environments.

"Learning now requires pupil participation and expression rather than listening and regurgitation."

Mr. Bunn said school facilities such as open teaching areas should provide for various learning situations by groups and individuals. The trend to non-graded classes and the stress on individual learning should be continued.

Libraries, the heart of any school, should be made more attractive in exposing pupils to books.

"All these new ideas, new equipment, new designs, are useless unless many of our teachers are up-dated and in part — retrained."

"In-service training is essential." The warden teacher does not belong in the school of today, or tomorrow, Mr. Bunn said.

Psychology Head Resigns at UVic

Dr. William Gaddes has resigned as head of the psychology department at the University of Victoria, but will remain on the faculty.

University president Dr. Malcolm Taylor said Tuesday that Dr. Gaddes' resignation was accepted "with great reluctance."

Dr. Gaddes, 54, began teaching at Victoria College in 1946. He became head of the psychology department in 1961.

DOING RESEARCH
He is now on a year's sabbatical leave, doing research on mental retardation at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and Boston University.

Dr. Gaddes was given a $15,000 grant by the Canadian Association for Retarded Children.

"We regret Dr. Gaddes' decision in view of his development of a first-rate department," said Dr. Taylor.

"Acting head of the department is Dr. Gordon Hobson, 46, a member of the faculty since 1964. He is a specialist in motivational psychology and alcoholism research."

Killer Disease
NEW DELHI (Reuters)—Ten thousand people died of smallpox in India during the first half of this year. This is double the smallpox incidence in the previous year.

To Trapped Rescuer Canada Returns Frigid Favor

It appeared to be a case of one good turn deserving another Tuesday, as a Canadian icebreaker headed to help its U.S. Coast Guard counterpart.

The icebreaker Northwind, now trapped in Arctic ice with a broken propeller, earlier in the season went to the assistance of the Canadian hydrographic ship Richardson. The 66-foot survey ship was trapped in the ice July 18. Breaking her clear took the Northwind and the Canadian icebreaker Camels three days.

SIMILAR STRAITS

Now the Northwind is in a similar predicament off Point Barrow, Alaska. The east coast-based Canadian Coast Guard icebreaker John A. Macdonald is on the way to the rescue.

The U.S. Coast Guard icebreaker Glacier has also been dispatched from Sacramento, Calif., to help. She estimates to be in the area within 12 days.

The Macdonald has completed a trip through the Northwest Passage to assist in the ice-choked waters of the western Arctic.

ANOTHER ESCORT

She had just finished escorting the Arctic freighter Broderick from Cambridge Bay to Tuktoyaktuk.

She was to return through the passage when the Northwind called for assistance. If the rescue operation is unsuccessful, the Northwind will be stranded in the ice until next summer.

It also appears the John A. Macdonald will have to return to Dartmouth, N.S., via the Panama Canal. Reports Tuesday indicated the Northwest Passage would be iced up in a matter of days.

Supermarkets May Face Strike Vote

Cconciliation talks between the retail clerks union and major supermarkets have "broken down completely," a spokesman for the employees said Tuesday.

"The operators refused to agree to anything," said Rudy Kriekan, secretary-treasurer of the Retail Food and Drug Clerks Union. "We feel we are going to be challenged to take strike action before we get talks."

The 2,000 employees are asking an extra $1 an hour. Current wage rates range from $1.70 to $2.35 an hour. About 30 stores in Victoria are involved.

Psychologist Faces Impostor Charges

KIMBERLEY (CP) — A man alleged to have claimed he had a master's degree in psychiatry will appear in court Friday charged with using bogus credentials to get a school psychologist's job at this southeastern British Columbia community.

Charged with false pretences and two charges of uttering forged documents is Ronald Ivan MacDonald, 30, alias James Colin MacDougall who has been released from custody on $2,000 bail.

No plea was entered when MacDonald appeared in court last Friday.

Harvey Drudul, secretary-treasurer of the Kimberley school board, said in a prepared statement Tuesday that a man, named James Colin MacDougall, replied to the board's advertisement for a district psychologist on July 5, 1967.

"The school board interviewed a Mr. MacDougall on Aug. 15 in Kimberley and his credentials, which appeared to be well-established, were re-

34 Deaths Traced To Bread

TIJUANA, Mexico (CP) — Bread, not milk, was said Tuesday night to be the cause of a mysterious poisoning that accounted for a reported 34 dead in this border area.

Pedro Miralles Malpica, attorney-general of Baja California, was reported to have given the death toll. (See earlier story, Page 20.)

Drafted for Union Nationale

SPLIT-NATION PLAN FANS CONTROVERSY

Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — The federal government's efforts to preserve national unity were shaken Tuesday by disclosure of a plan, linked to the Union Nationale party, to make Quebec an independent state within five years.

A spokesman for Prime Minister Pearson said he is still unaware of the plan, carried in full in the Quebec City newspaper L'Action.

But Pearson, he added, was not going to be in favor of "anyone's plan to break up Canada. That's his position."

MORE PRESSURE

Reports about the existence of the plan have fanned the flames of crisis over national unity and added to the pressures on Mr. Pearson to scrap his plans for early retirement.

L'Action links the "secret plan" directly to the Union Nationale, led by Premier Daniel Johnson.

The feeling here is that it is not the policy of the party, but it could become the policy.

NO MANDATE?

Observers believe that the separatist wing of the party is trying to persuade the party to accept it, but the moderates believe the party does not have a mandate from the people to go that far.

L'Action says the plan is laid out in a confidential document drafted by 40 specialists, some of them not engaged in politics but invited to serve on an advisory committee that prepared the Union Nationale program before the June, 1966, provincial election.

ECONOMIC TIES

It is entitled: "How to bring about a confederation of two autonomous states."

It favors total economic integration between English-Canada and French-Canada.

VANCOUVER (CP) — A Quebec cabinet minister spoke forcefully in defence of a united Canada Tuesday, and refused to concede that his province is moving towards separatism.

"This is our Canada," Fernand J. Lafontaine, Quebec roads minister, told a press conference at the Canadian Good Roads Association convention. He is president of the CGRA.

Mr. Lafontaine, after announcing that the world highways conference of the International Road Federation would be held in Montreal in 1970, emphasized that Quebec still would be a province of Canada at that time.

He said he agreed with Premier Johnson of Quebec and Bennett of British Columbia that the objective for Canada should be "equality yes, uniformity never."

"I feel as 'at home' here in Vancouver as I do in the province of Quebec," he said. "This is our Canada."

QUEBEC (CP) — Two leading members of a Quebec separatist club said Tuesday they helped prepare a document for the Union Nationale party suggesting a five-year plan for Quebec independence.

But they said their plan, drawn up as possible party policy for the 1966 general election, was rejected by the Union Nationale because "the party was interested in winning an election."

L'Action, one of the provincial capital's two evening dailies, published portions of the document Tuesday, describing it as the Union Nationale's "secret plan for the political independence of Quebec."

MAJOR ROLES

Major roles in drafting the document were played by Guy Bertrand, 30-year-old lawyer, and Georges Caron, 45-year-old stock broker, respectively, president and past-president of the Club Fleuri-de-Lys.

Mr. Bertrand said in an interview he acted as co-chairman of a 40-man "committee on the affairs of the nation," formed by the Union Nationale to study possible policies concerning Quebec's political status.

SUBMISSIONS

At this time the Union Nationale was in a period of policy study and had requested submissions from representative associations in Quebec, such as labor unions and agricultural organizations.

The Bertrand committee was one of 12 committees within the Union Nationale co-ordinated by Marcel Masse, associate minister of education, to draw up a political program to fight against the then Liberal government.

Mr. Bertrand described his committee as the "inner sanctum" of the Union Nationale party where members worked inognito. Among members, he said, were employees of Radio-Canada, the CBC's French-language network.

IN SECRECY

He said the committee members, who made submissions with the understanding that they were working in secrecy, arrived at a decision Quebec should have "political sovereignty within a Canadian association."

Mr. Bertrand said the committee was then instructed by the party to work out a solution for political sovereignty which would be considered by the party brass, including Premier Daniel Johnson.

Sholepin: Out

MOSCOW (CP) — The Communist Party central committee met in plenary session Wednesday and approved a new Soviet budget believed to contain a substantial increase in published defence spending.

An official communique said the committee also voted to relieve Alexander Sholepin, once regarded as a rising star, of his duties as a party secretary.

The committee also decided to raise minimum wages, and increase pensions and holidays for millions of Soviet workers.

Sholepin, youngest member of the politburo at 47, was appointed head of the Central trade union council last July 11.

HARLINGEN, Tex. (AP) — The Rio Grande, breaking every man-made obstacle in its path, toppled a levee north of Harlingen late Tuesday night and a new surge of floodwaters bore down on the already ravaged city.

Communications with Harlingen, in the middle of the flood-ravaged Rio Grande Valley, were all but impossible.

A military radio message from Harlingen bumped all conventional traffic off the air for an urgent message.

"The floodway levee near Farm Road 506 has broken," the message said. The area to the east and west of Harlingen and La Feria was taking more water.

The Rio Grande, on a record rampage with its crest still above Harlingen, toppled emergency dikes as fast as they could be put up Tuesday.

Paul Reier, an Associated Press reporter forced to flee along with thousands of residents, reported this scene in a radio message from Harlingen Air Force Base:

FLOODING HOUSES

"The water was coming out of stores down town . . . A number of people on army trucks are trying to get out . . . Babies are crying . . . Their parents are crying . . ."

The Rio Grande was a great inland sea studded with floating houses, dead cattle and other debris from Hurricane Beulah. Sandbagging crews lost a battle to keep the floodwaters, which were coming mainly from a floodway diversion area called Arroyo Colorado, out of Harlingen. Unhindered by their efforts, the floodwaters surged into the heart of this city of 41,000.

Jordanian Confident Pact Chances Good

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Foreign Minister Muhammad Audeh el-Aamry of Jordan told reporters Tuesday "the chances are good" that a settlement may be reached in the Middle East deadlock.

Aamry made the prediction after conferring for more than an hour with the U.S. state secretary, Dean Rusk.

The Jordanian expressed hope that Israel would move out of positions along the west-bank of the Jordan River. Reimbursement of the Tel Aviv government has announced its determination to stay there for the time being at least, he said.

Happiest, Healthiest Nation Will Be First to Ban Cars

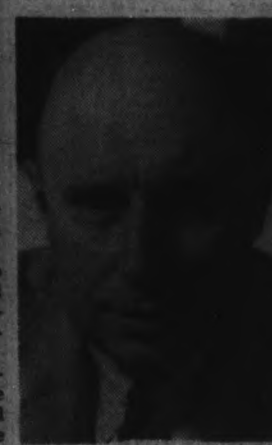

VANCOUVER (CP) — The automobile will disappear before the end of the next century, the Canadian Good Roads Association was told Tuesday.

Dr. Gordon M. Shrum, chancellor of Simon Fraser University and co-chairman of British Columbia Hydro, made this prediction in his keynote address to the association's 40th annual convention.

Dr. Shrum said there is no such thing as an unlimited resource, and said world supplies of gas and oil would disappear during the 21st century.

He said pollution, an ever-increasing accident rate and the fact that land will be needed for raising food will contribute to the demise of cars and highways.

Dr. Shrum, predicting that the number of vehicles in Canada will increase to 40,000,000 from the present 7,000,000 by the end of this century, said the first country to abolish the motor car will be the healthiest, happiest and wealthiest in the world. This would come in the 21st century.

Fernand J. Lafontaine, Quebec's minister of roads and president of the CGRA, told the more than 1,000 delegates highway building must be co-ordinated with overall planning of mass transport systems.

"The techniques of transportation should not only interest the road engineer," he said. "The problem should also be considered by the town planners, the sociologists, economists and architects if we want to build cities worthy of man."

Squeeze Wrecks Powerful Car

NANAIMO—A three-car pileup resulting in $3,000 damage sent a man's wife to hospital, and ruined his car.

Sandra Able, 21, was rushed to Nanaimo Regional Hospital suffering from shock and cuts to her right leg, shortly after the 3:30 p.m. accident at the corner of Terminal and Roshill.

Her husband Bruce accompanied her to hospital, uninjured.

The southbound car in which she was riding was sandwiched between a truck driven by David Waldron, 23, 24 Acacia, Nanaimo, and at the rear by a car driven by Roger Lyle McLeod, 1425, Montrose, Nanaimo.

A fourth vehicle, an unidentified truck, had made a stop at a crosswalk.

The Able car, was a 1967 Lotus Cortina.

Mr. Able, 22, said the car was one of five in Canada, with 105 horse power, which can reach true speeds of 125 miles an hour.

"They're not making them anymore," he said sadly. Although the name is being used in 1968, the auto originally built to Lotus standards, using British Ford body, is now being built entirely by the Ford Company.

Ladysmith Wants Land Title

By R. E. WOOD

LADYSMITH—Where is the title to the grounds of Ladysmith Agricultural Society?

This tough question was reviewed by the recreation commission at the last meeting of town council, in a request that council try to get definite ownership.

This would mean administrative jurisdiction of the recreation commission can be properly established.

The property, includes, in a five-acre block, adjacent to Symonds Street, a ball park and stands and the Agricultural Hall, erected in 1925 when the Ladysmith and District Agricultural Society Fall Fair was a significant mid-Island event.

When support for the Society's activities dwindled to the un-economic point, Ladysmith Lions Club rallied to the cause, revived the Annual Fall Fair for several years, acquired a lease on the whole property, and spent $15,000 improving the field, grandstands and the buildings.

When it was decided that the City of Ladysmith should acquire title and bring the property within municipal ownership, the original grant or deed could not be located.

From time to time the subject was discussed by Council but nothing was resolved.

As a result of the request by the Ladysmith Recreation Commission, another attempt by the Town Council will be made to clarify the situation to permit definite action.

Despite a complete ban on sprinkling, the Ladysmith water situation is still critical. Reserves of water have dwindled to the muddy stage.

The Stocking Lake supply is down to six feet and the swirl at the intake is stirring up the fine silt.

Less than an inch of rain has fallen on the watershed area in the past 100 days. The Provost Dam reservoir has retreated to the original swamp.

To aggravate the situation, a break on a control valve at the Diamond reservoir wasted several hundred thousand gallons of the precious fluid before it could be rectified.

"Rainfall is our only hope," remarked Mayor Keith Greenhalgh. "But I still feel from examination of the records, that many consumers are being wasteful with water."

Bruce Tait, consulting engineer, submitted some recommendations and cost estimates for improvements on Stocking Lake dam.

The proposals include extensive sandbagging on this face, some outlet cleaning, and sandbagging of the spillway to provide additional storage in the lake.

Indian Children Losing Language of Fathers

Story and photos
By AGNES LEFFY

DUNCAN — The Cowichan Indian band, concerned that the band's native tongue is becoming a dead language, has started an adult education course to teach it to both white and young Indians.

The language has never been written down. Mrs. Dennis Alphonse, wife of the Cowichan Indian band chief, and Mrs. Ruby Peters, are the instructors in the first course, for which about 25 white people have registered.

Cost of the language course is $15.

Mrs. Alphonse said Cowichan Indians feel their language may be lost entirely if it is not revived soon.

Among those registered in the first known adult Indian language course on Vancouver Island are several elderly white men and women from the Cowichan Valley. Father John Bernard McQuinn of the Cowichan Valley, local Indian Agent R. D. Simpson, and some senior high school Indian students.

New and difficult sounds are pronounced repeatedly by the class, then written down as they sound.

Many years ago, a priest attempted to write the language, and his records will be used in later stages of the course.

So much is heard of integration—in this unique program, those being integrated are the whites.

The Cowichan language is similar to the Coast Salish-Indian dialect, Mrs. Alphonse said.

The course is being held at the regular night school classes in Duncan.

Senior band members said they were surprised at the interest shown by senior high school Indian students who expressed the wish to learn more about their native tongue.

It may be a small beginning, but the principle is not. The program is demonstrating how much the Indian people are taking the initiative to preserve their culture and heritage.

Tijuana Poison Sought

TIJUANA, Mexico (AP)—The death toll from a mysterious mass poisoning affecting mostly children rose higher Tuesday as scientists worked to discover the killer agent.

Thirteen have died and 200 persons were in hospital, some in critical condition. Two of the deaths were reported Tuesday. The outbreak began Monday when hundreds of children in this city of 265,000 on the U.S. border were hit by vomiting and nausea. Hospitals quickly were jammed with suffering tots and a few adults.

MEDICAL VIEW

In San Diego, Calif., across the border, where health officials were asked to try to isolate the poison, the county health director, Dr. J. B. Askew, said:

"The symptoms indicate an acute food poisoning caused by either chemicals or bacteria, but we cannot say at this point what it is. There is no indication that it is anything but food poisoning."

Dr. Askew's office tested tissue specimens, milk and water. Other specimens were sent to the state agriculture department in Sacramento, Calif., to see whether pesticides were involved.

STILL SEARCH

Tijuana milk is pasteurized, Dr. Askew said.

"We are analysing it in the search for heavy metals, such as lead, zinc or arsenic," he said. "While we don't know if it is a chemical or bacterial poison, we are leaning more toward the chemical theory at this time. But if it is a chemical it must be a very potent one."

POVERTY AREA

Earlier, authorities questioned about 20 dairy operators, store owners and vendors in search for the source of the outbreak.

Most of the children ranged in age from one to 11, and most of them came from Colonia Libertad, a poverty area where thousands live in makeshift shanties.

Hospitals were jammed. In some cases two children occupied the same bed.

Tree-Top Air Rescue Ends 58-Day Terror

MANILA (Reuters)—A Philippine air force helicopter, on orders from President Marcos, Tuesday plucked a 45-year-old farmer from a 60-foot tree-top perch where he lived for 58 days to dodge a village lynch mob.

Quirino Berja fought and kicked as a doctor swung down from the helicopter and grabbed him. But he was hauled aboard and whisked off to hospital. He was hardly able to straighten his legs.

Berja crouched atop a palm tree for 58 days, terrified that villagers he quarrelled with at his daughter's wedding would murder him if he came down. He said he saw one of his sons murdered at the foot of the tree a week after he climbed up it. Two men arrested in connection with the son's death are out on bail.

Inquest at Chemainus

'Driver Going Too Fast'

CHEMAINUS—Two witnesses testified at an inquest that a Chemainus youth was travelling "too fast" just before the car crashed, killing the driver instantly.

Richard Simmonds, 17, was killed Sept. 9 on the Bell-McKinnon Road, south of Chemainus, while returning from a visit to the Cowichan Exhibition at Duncan.

Daniel Wayne Andruff, 17, of Chemainus, a passenger in the car, said "Richard decided to go by Bell-McKinnon."

"He was driving kind of fast, we came to a curve, he made the right corner fine, then he crashed, killing the driver instantly."

"It went sideways, then straight across the road, and into the ditch. He hit some trees and that's all I can remember."

He said the next thing he could remember was the car being at a standstill.

"Richard was out of the car,"

he said. "Helen was beside me. Then she started screaming. I saw Richard lying outside the car. I took Helen by the hand and ran up the road to get help."

He told the jury he "never looked at the speedometer, but he (Richard) was exceeding 30 miles an hour."

Speed limit on the road is 30 mph.

Sixteen-year-old Helen Fowler, Chemainus, the other passenger, said, "He was going too fast..."

"I don't remember hitting anything... it was just sort of a jolt."

She said she thought he was driving too fast but did not mention it to the driver. "I'd say he was doing 45 but I'm not sure," she said.

Miss Fowler said no one in the car was wearing seat belts at the time of the accident.

Const. Ronald Sheffield testified the youth was apparently thrown from the vehicle and struck a tree.

He stated there were seat belts in the vehicle.

"If the driver had been wearing a seat belt, I believe definitely his life would have been saved," he said.

He added there was no alcohol in the youth's blood.

Dr. Joseph Pawlowski, of Duncan, said cause of death was severe head and brain damage.

The jury returned a verdict that the cause of the accident was "loss of control due to excessive speed."

Croner was Dr. R. R. Wilson of Duncan.

Jail Term Follows Two Crashes

LADYSMITH—A 27-year-old Ladysmith man, Allan George Russell, will spend the next 45 days in jail.

Russell was convicted Tuesday on four charges.

On a charge of driving while his driver's licence was under suspension, following an accident at Ladysmith Aug. 30, Russell was sentenced to 45 days in jail with no option of a fine.

Following the accident a female passenger and Russell were both taken to hospital.

The young woman was detained overnight for treatment of minor injuries. Russell was bailed and released the same night.

Russell was fined $50 or 15 days in jail for driving without due care and attention.

A second charge of driving while under suspension drew a 30-day sentence. This charge was laid in Nanaimo, Aug. 28.

He was also charged with a second offence of driving without due care and attention, following an accident in Nanaimo, July 15.

Police said Russell was backing up his car when it went out of control and over a bank.

For this infraction he was fined $35 or 10 days in jail.

All sentences will run concurrently.

Police said Russell originally had his driver's licence suspended by the superintendent of motor vehicles for an unsatisfactory driving record.

Boat Burns Near Tofino

TOFINO—A 40-foot troller burned to the waterline and sank south of here shortly before noon Tuesday.

The only person aboard the Reimar, Tofino fisherman Terry Robinson, escaped unhurt.

He radioed several Mayday calls, which were picked up by the Tofino

DOT lifeboat, several nearby fishing boats and the tug Gulf Joan.

The tug was first on the scene and crew members plucked Mr. Robinson from the water.

He was transferred to the Tofino lifeboat and taken back to the town. A Rescue Co-ordination Centre spokesman said no immediate reason was known for the fire.

Teenager Shoots Big Buck With Accurate Arrow

DUNCAN—A Duncan youth, and already he has made a name for himself.

On the Labor Day weekend in Vancouver, Charlie broke every existing record, in junior competitions held by the Lower Mainland Archery Association.

His wins made him the B.C. Junior Champion.

Last weekend, Charlie went hunting in the Wellburn area at Glenora, south of Duncan.

He returned home with a spike buck.

A fellow member of the Cowichan Bowmen, Guy Antilla of Ladysmith, went hunting last week in the Monashee area near Vernon.

Guy brought home a mountain goat, and he also shot a deer with his bow and arrow.

Guy works for Williams' Archery at Ladysmith, where he makes his own bows.

Psychologist Faces Impostor Charges

KIMBERLEY (CP) — A man alleged to have claimed he had a master's degree in psychiatry will appear in court Friday charged with using bogus credentials to get a school psychologist's job at this southeastern British Columbia community.

Charged with false pretences and two charges of uttering forged documents is Ronald Ivan MacDonald, 30, alias James Colin MacDougall, who has been released from custody on $2,000 bail.

No plea was entered when MacDonald appeared in court last Friday.

Harvey Drudul, secretary-treasurer of the Kimberley school board, said in a prepared statement Tuesday that a man named James Colin MacDougall replied to the board's advertisement for a district psychologist on July 5, 1967.

The school board interviewed a Mr. MacDougall on Aug. 15 in Kimberley and his credentials, which appeared to be well-established, were re-

TIJUANA, Mexico (CP) — Bread, not milk, was said Tuesday night to be the cause of a mysterious poisoning that accounted for a reported 34 dead in this border area.

Pedro Mireles Malpica, attorney-general of Baja California, was reported to have given the death toll. (See earlier story, Page 36.)

Police here said 110 persons were in hospital.

SPLIT PLAN FANS CRISIS

Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — The federal government's efforts to preserve national unity were shaken Tuesday by disclosure of a plan, linked to the Union Nationale party, to make Quebec an independent state within five years.

A spokesman for Prime Minister Pearson said he is still unaware of the plan, carried in full in the Quebec City newspaper L'Action.

But Pearson, he added, was not going to be in favor of "anyone's plan to break up Canada. That's his position."

MORE PRESSURE

Reports about the existence of the plan have fanned the flames of crisis over national unity and added to the pressures on Pearson to scrap his plans for early retirement.

L'Action links the "secret plan" directly to the Union Nationale, led by Premier Daniel Johnson.

The feeling here is that it is not the policy of the party, but it could become the policy.

NO MANDATE?

Observers believe that the separatist wing of the party is trying to persuade the party to accept it, but the moderates believe the party does not have a mandate from the people to go that far.

L'Action says the plan is laid out in a confidential document drafted by 40 specialists, some of them not engaged in politics but invited to serve on an advisory committee that prepared the Union Nationale program before the June, 1966, provincial election.

ECONOMIC TIES

It is entitled: "How to bring about a confederation of two autonomous states."

It favors total economic integration between English-Canada and French-Canada.

The Quebec newspaper says Jean-Noel Tremblay, Quebec's minister of cultural affairs, was

'This Is Our Canada' 'Turned Down To Win'

VANCOUVER (CP) — A Quebec cabinet minister spoke forcefully in defence of a united Canada Tuesday, and refused to concede that his province is moving towards separatism.

"This is our Canada," Fernand J. Lafontaine, Quebec roads minister, told a press conference at the Canadian Good Roads Association convention. He is president of the CGRA.

Mr. Lafontaine, after announcing that the world highways conference of the International Road Federation would be held in Montreal in 1970, emphasized that Quebec still would be a province of Canada at that time.

He said he agreed with premiers Johnson of Quebec and Bennett of British Columbia that the objective for Canada should be "equality yes, uniformity never."

"I feel as 'at home' here in Vancouver as I do in the province of Quebec," he said. "This is our Canada."

QUEBEC (CP) — Two leading members of a Quebec separatist club said Tuesday they helped prepare a document for the Union Nationale party suggesting a five-year plan for Quebec independence.

But they said their plan, drawn up as possible party policy for the 1966 general election, was rejected by the Union Nationale because "the party was interested in winning an election."

MAJOR ROLES

Major roles in drafting the document were played by Guy Bertrand, 30-year-old lawyer, and Georges Gagnon, 45-year-old "book broker," respectively president and past-president of the Club Fleury-de-Lys.

Mr. Bertrand said in an interview he acted as co-chairman of a 40-man "committee on the affairs of the nation," formed by the Union Nationale to study possible policies concerning Quebec's political status.

At this time the Union Nationale was in a period of policy study and had requested submissions from representative associations in Quebec, such as labor unions and agricultural organizations.

The Bertrand committee was one of 12 committees within the Union Nationale co-ordinated by Marcel Masse, associate minister of education, to draw up a political program, to fight against the then Liberal government.

Mr. Bertrand described his committee as the "inner sanctum" of the Union Nationale party where members worked incognito. Among members, he said, were employees of Radio-Canada, the CBC's French-language network.

IN SECRECY

He said the committee members, who made submissions with the understanding that they were working in secrecy, arrived at a decision Quebec should have "political sovereignty within a Canadian association."

Mr. Bertrand said the committee was then instructed by the party to work out a solution for political sovereignty which would be considered by the party brass, including Premier Daniel Johnson.

Sholepin: Out

MOSCOW (CP) — The Communist Party central committee met in plenary session Wednesday and approved a new Soviet budget believed to contain a substantial increase in published defence spending.

An official communique said the committee also voted to relieve Alexander Sholepin, once regarded as a rising star, of his duties as a party secretary.

The committee also decided to raise minimum wages, and increase pensions and holidays for millions of Soviet workers.

Sholepin, youngest member of the politburo at 47, was appointed head of the Central trade union council last July 11.

HARLINGEN, Tex. (AP) — The Rio Grande, breaking every man-made obstacle in its path, toppled a levee north of Harlingen late Tuesday night and a new surge of floodwaters bore down on the already ravaged city.

Communications with Harlingen, in the middle of the flood-ravaged Rio Grande Valley, were all but impossible.

A military radio message from Harlingen bumped all conventional traffic off the air for an urgent message.

"The floodway levee near Farm Road 506 has broken," the message said. The area to the east and west of Harlingen and La Feria was taking more water.

The Rio Grande, on a record rampage with its crest still above Harlingen, toppled emergency dikes as fast as they could be put up Tuesday.

Paul Reiser, an Associated Press reporter forced to flee along with thousands of residents, reported this scene in a radio message from Harlingen Air Force Base:

FLOODING HOUSES

"The water was coming out of stores downtown... A number of people on army trucks are trying to get out... Babies are crying... Their parents are crying..."

The Rio Grande was a great inland sea studded with floating houses, dead cattle and other debris from Hurricane Beulah.

Sandbagging crews lost a battle to keep the floodwaters, which were coming mainly from a floodway diversion area called Arroyo Colorado, out of Harlingen. Unhindered by their efforts, the floodwaters surged into the heart of this city of 41,000.

Have to Come Through UN

Jordanian Confident Pact Chances Good

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Foreign Minister Muhammad Audeh el-Aamry of Jordan told reporters Tuesday "the chances are good" that a settlement may be reached in the Middle East deadlock.

Aamry made the prediction after conferring for more than an hour with the U.S. state secretary, Dean Rusk.

The Jordanian expressed hope that Israel would move out of positions along the west bank of the Jordan River. Reminded that the Tel Aviv government has announced its determination to stay there for the time being at least, he said:

"There is a possibility of a way out. I think this will have to come through the UN but the chances are good."

A spokesman for the Israeli delegation told reporters Israel had set up strongpoints along the west bank to bolster military security. He stressed that this did not signify any move by Israel to decide the future of the disputed territory.

VANCOUVER (CP) — The automobile will disappear before the end of the next century, the Canadian Good Roads Association was told Tuesday.

Dr. Gordon M. Shrum, chancellor of Simon Fraser University and co-chairman of British Columbia Hydro, made this prediction in his keynote address to the association's 49th annual convention.

Dr. Shrum said there is no such thing as an unlimited resource, and said world supplies of gas and oil would disappear during the 21st century.

He said pollution, an ever-increasing accident rate and the fact that land will be needed for raising food will contribute to the demise of cars and highways.

Dr. Shrum, predicting that the number of vehicles in Canada will increase to 40,000,000 from the present 7,000,000 by the end of this century, said the first country to abolish the motor car will be the healthiest, happiest and wealthiest in the world. This would come in the 21st century.

Fernand J. Lafontaine, Quebec's minister of roads and president of the CGRA, told the more than 1,000 delegates highway building must be co-ordinated with overall planning of mass transport systems.

"The techniques of transportation should not only interest the road engineers," he said. "The problem should also be considered by the town planners, the sociologists, economists and architects if we want to build cities worthy of man."

She Went Near The Water

DALLAS (UPI) — A Grand Prairie, Tex., father has sued a discount store for selling a bathing suit to his 13-year-old daughter which allegedly became transparent in water and displayed "all her unsightly charms... in fact."

Attorney Samuel Fairbrother asked $190 damages in the suit in Justice of the Peace Tom Naylor's court.

The complaint said the discount store gave an "implied warranty that (the swimsuit) would sufficiently clothe and cover the various parts of the anatomy that a swimsuit is meant to cover."

Dining Big Foursome Skips War Course

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — The big four foreign ministers met for more than 2 1/2 hours here Tuesday night, but apparently did not discuss Vietnam.

Asked by reporters if Vietnam was among items discussed at the dinner with Secretary-General U Thant, Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko answered: "No."

He and other ministers said Thant would make a statement on behalf of all of them.

The occasion was a "discussion dinner" in Thant's office suite with no set agenda and every participant entitled to raise any subject he pleased.

Apollo Shot Delayed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The first manned Apollo space shot — originally scheduled for the early part of next year — may be delayed until mid-summer.

A spokesman for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration said Tuesday that due to modification of the Apollo capsule by its prime contractor, North American Aviation, a delay in the delivery is expected.
